

As governor, a record of paradoxes

Carter, a secretive man who calls for candor

By PHIL GAILEY and AARON EPSTEIN
Knight News Service

ATLANTA — To those who wonder what kind of a president he'd be, Jimmy Carter replied: "Look at the kind of governor I was."

If his record as governor of Georgia from 1971 to 1974 is a clue, the 51-year-old Carter would bring to the White House enormous energy, stamina and self-discipline, and a zeal for reform, planning and management.

He would at times be combative, vindictive, self-confident — sometimes even self-righteous. "We'll fight the bastards together," he wrote to one state official who allied himself with Carter early in his administration.

Knight News Service reporters spent three weeks in Georgia researching Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter's record as governor. They found that he can be secretive, while publicly advocating candor, and receptive of lobbyists' favors while denouncing that political practice. This is the second report of the Knight News Service investigation.

And he would not always be able to live up to the high standards he publicly set for himself.

As governor, he loathed secrecy while being secretive, denounced lobbyists while accepting favors from some of them, and held aloft a banner of candor which didn't always cover him.

Yet, despite the contradictions, Carter did much to raise the ethical standards of government in a state not known for them.

He's a hungry politician, and even his closest associates aren't sure what drives him.

Little things reveal the man. He loves to tinker with the nuts and bolts of government, like a mechanic trying to tune a race car engine. "The thing that I like, perhaps best, about government is the detailed administration," he once said.

"He's a superb executive," said Atlanta banker Bert Lance, who served as Carter's transportation chief. "His imaginative tactics are homework and hard work."

He prizes time to the point that punctuality is an obsession.

Jim Parham, head of Georgia's Department of Human Resources, recalls when Carter invited some of his department heads to accompany him on a "listening" tour of the state. One official was not there by scheduled departure time, so Carter ordered the plane to take off without him.

Carter seemed to resent those who would waste his time, and, as a result, he preferred to work from memos. He wrote his own in longhand, hundreds of them, about everything from a dam project to a leaky faucet in a Capitol restroom.

"He can get a lot more work done that way," explained William L. Harper, who served as Carter's legal aide. "He felt like he wasted a lot of his time meeting with people in his office on things that could be covered in a brief memo."

Viking 2 probes for marsquakes

PASADENA (AP) — The Viking 2's robot lander began probing for marsquakes Sunday and sent back to Earth color photos of the red field and orange sky over Mars' plain of Utopia.

Mission director Tom Young said that all systems aboard the lander checked out "just fine" and that soil-sampling experiments should begin late this week.

MEANWHILE, the entire seismic experimentation phase was riding on Viking 2 because Viking 1's seismometer failed to work.

"We should be able to see what would be a magnitude 6 earthquake (on the Richter scale)," said Dr. Gary Latham of the project's seismology team, adding that anything weaker might not register. "We're quite encouraged about the prospects. It's as good as many seismological stations on Earth."

Latham said marsquakes are the same strength as earthquakes. Quakes registering 6 have caused severe damage on Earth.

Scientists had been concerned about Viking 2's seismometer because the craft apparently landed quite hard and because the quake-measuring instrument aboard Viking 1 could never be uncaged after the craft's landing.

But Sunday, Viking 2 sent word that its seismometer was functional and "quite clearly operating as expected," Latham said.

Viking 2 also gave earthmen a weather report Sunday, logging a nighttime temperature in Utopia of 35 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit — about 5 degrees colder than the resting place of Viking 1.

Scientists said all Viking 2's equipment seemed to be working well and what at first appeared to be a rip on its dish-shaped radio antenna may have been a splotch of mud. Scientists said the craft may have kicked some dirt onto the scanner during its lopsided landing and that would account for the dark slash-like line on the device.

Young said that Viking 2's complicated gas chromatograph-mass spectrometer experiment was ready to receive its first sample of soil late this week. The spectrometer scans the sample, then reports the chemical elements contained in it.

The gas-release experiment will be looking particularly for signs of

Storm mars holiday weekend

By DICK ROWLAND and BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writers

A quick-moving thunderstorm Sunday evening lashed parts of the Southland with hailstones and lightning, causing power blackouts in the homes of an estimated 10,000 residents.

Lightning bolts hit transmitters atop Mt. Wilson late Sunday night, shutting off television and radio station signals for several minutes.

The storm capped a showery, muggy day that was discouraging to many persons attempting to celebrate the last days of summer outdoors in traditional Labor Day weekend style.

There were no reports of injury from the lightning storm, which played havoc with the Orange County and South Bay areas and kept Southern California Edison Co. emergency crews busy restoring downed power lines.

An Edison spokesman said about 1,000 customers, mainly in the South Bay area, were without service from a few minutes to a couple of hours.

Bay Harbor Hospital in Harbor City was forced to use emergency power generators, and Santa Monica police reported their switchboard was out of service for ten minutes.

Workers for the county's Department of Water and Power reported 200 to 300 electrical wires out of commission in the Bell Gardens and Huntington Park area.

In Orange County, authorities reported several lightning-related blackouts and said large hailstones fell intermittently through the evening.

The storm, caused by a high altitude low-pressure area just southwest of Long Beach, was expected to move northward over the mountains by this morning.

Variable clouds were forecast for today in the Long Beach area with the chance of rain decreasing to near zero.

Long Beach lifeguards reported a "very quiet day" Sunday with 60,000 beachgoers, eight rescues and six boat assists — low numbers for a Labor Day weekend.

The high temperature for Long Beach was 83 degrees. Only a trace of rain was recorded.

Another 800,000 sunbathers visited the shore from Huntington Beach to Malibu. Beach attendance was normal in some areas, but smaller than usual for a Labor Day weekend in most places.

Light surf with low tides held down the number of swimmers that had to be rescued, although one lifeguard said there were more first-aid calls than usual due to "excessive drinking."

The only lifeguards who had to work very hard were nine guards who completed a grueling week-long journey from Point Conception to Huntington Beach, running 200 miles and swimming another 40 miles.

Raymond Bray, junior lifeguard instructor, said 14 Huntington Beach junior guards started the trip Aug. 29 as a challenge and to see the coastline firsthand. Nine finished; the

RUSS PILOT PULLS GUN IN JAPAN

TOKYO (AP) — A Soviet jet fighter made an emergency landing today at the Hakodate airport, at the southern tip of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, the Defense Agency announced.

The twin-jet MIG25 overran the runway when it landed, the agency said. Unconfirmed reports said the Soviet pilot brandished a pistol to keep airport officials away from his plane.

Jet hijackers quit, free 80

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — Three Palestinian hijackers released the 75 passengers and five crew members of a Dutch jetliner Sunday in exchange for a safe-conduct promise from Greek Cypriot authorities, airport officials said.

The freed hostages, including two Americans, were brought to the airport terminal building by bus from the DC9 that had been parked at the edge of this small airport's runway for four hours.

THE hijackers commandeered the jet Saturday over France and hoppedscotched around the Mediterranean through the night and morning, threatening to blow up the plane and all aboard unless Israel released eight prisoners.

The passengers greeted Georgios Tombazos, the Cypriot minister of communications and works, who led the negotiations, with cheers and applause. One American among them, Otto Horsting of Selma, Ala., said the ordeal had been "scary."

"The hijackers grasped hand grenades and modern-looking guns," Horsting said. "We were told the plane was hijacked almost as soon as we left Nice."

"The hijackers did not ill-treat us. They said this was the only way they could make the world realize what was happening in their country, Palestine. They assured us that we would not be harmed," he said.

An official of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines said the passengers and crew would be flown to Amsterdam.

Azores crash blamed on hurricane

PONTA DELGADA, Azores (AP) — The crash of a Venezuelan air force transport which killed 68 persons — most of them members of a college choir — was caused by an apparent navigational error during a hurricane, Portuguese officials said Sunday.

Officials said the plane tried to land at the U.S. base at Lajes amid strong winds and poor visibility caused by advancing Hurricane Emmy which, followed by a rare back-to-back hurricane, Frances, whirled through the Azores at the weekend.

Emmy produced thick low clouds, high winds and driving rain in the path of the airliner.

The C130 made two unsuccessful landing attempts, then on the third approach came in 400 yards to one side of the runway, officials said. The Lajes control tower radioed instructions to correct the plane's position, but the aircraft turned even farther from the runway and crashed about 1,000 yards away, the officials said.

The officials emphasized that their findings were preliminary and subject to correction by a probe by Venezuelan inspectors who flew to the Azores on Sunday.

Earlier reports of an engine fire in the plane moments before the accident appeared incorrect, the Portuguese officials said.

The choir was bound for a song festival in Barcelona, Spain. The Portuguese news agency ANOP reported that all receptions and other social events at the festival had been cancelled.

Airplane crash in Canada kills 10

FRASERDALE, Canada (AP) — A single-engine Otter aircraft attempting to land in fog on the Abitibi River crashed Saturday, killing all 10 persons aboard.

A spokesman for the plane's owners said Sunday the victims included officials of the Ontario royal commission on electric power planning.

Ted Nobbs, secretary of Austin Airways, said the plane, equipped with floats, may have been attempting to land because of weather conditions. It was on a charter flight from Moosonee to Timmins.

Provincial police said the plane went down in heavy fog after hitting high-tension power lines near a hydroelectric dam.

Nobbs said the pilot, Douglas Norman Clifford, 28, of White River, had been with Austin Airways about 1½ years and had more than 2,000 hours flying time.

In Toronto, Dennis Timbrell, Ontario energy minister, said the dead included two members of the royal commission staff, three representatives from Treaty No. 9, a northern Ontario Indian group, three Ontario Hydro officials, and a news reporter.

Their names were not released pending notification of relatives.

Ford asked to double Medicaid fraud probe

Mathews commented to reporters following an appearance on CBS "Face the Nation" during which he said "unless we improve the design no number of investigators will take care of the problem" of fraud in the $15 billion federal-state program.

Mathews' remarks came exactly one week after a Senate Special Committee on Aging reported that rampant fraud and abuse existed in the 10-year-old program designed to provide low-cost health care for the poor.

Mathews had been quoted as saying that committee chairman Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, was "grandstanding." Asked if that was an accurate quote, Mathews replied that he thought Moss "went to great lengths to dramatize the problem," adding "I welcome that."

In March, Mathews announced the formation of a special task force to ferret out the nursing homes and doctors who he said have been overcharging the gov-

Police stage sick-out

NEW ORLEANS — City policemen staged a "blue flu" Sunday and said they planned a Labor Day walkout today to protest being paid double-time instead of double-time-and-a-half for the holiday. Police officials estimated that 100 to 125 officers called in sick Sunday. The city has about 1,000 police officers, but spokesmen would not say how many were scheduled to work.

Optimism in Lebanon

BEIRUT — Despite increased hostilities, al Fatah, the main Palestinian guerrilla organization, expects to make "positive steps" this week toward ending the fighting in Lebanon and the guerrillas' confrontation with Syria, according to Abu Hassan Salamah, the head of Fatah's security section.

Abu Hassan spoke after separate meetings with Elias Sarkis, Lebanon's president-elect; Pierre Gemayel, the leader of the Christian Phalange party, and Patriarch Antonius Khoreish, the spiritual head of Lebanon's largest Christian community, the Maronites.

Abu Hassan is a top aide to Yasir Arafat, the leader and founder of al Fatah and chairman of the Palestine

At that time, Mathews said the HEW task force would include 108 federal Medicaid examiners and 74 criminal investigators. Asked Sunday about the need for more investigators, Mathews replied "it's quite possible we will have to increase the number."

He acknowledged, during an informal conversation with reporters following the program, that he has asked Ford to double the number of investigators.

Union boycott set

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. — About 3,000 textile workers and union supporters rallied Sunday to protest what they called the reluctance of a major textile firm to agree to a contract after two years of negotiations.

The Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union, backed by the AFL-CIO, plans to kick off a nationwide boycott today of the products of J.P. Stevens Co., the nation's second-largest textile manufacturer, which operates about 80 plants in the Southeast.

Stevens makes a wide range of textile products including sheets and clothing material sold under other labels by department stores and discount centers around the nation.

Two years ago, about 3,600 workers at seven Stevens plant in Roanoke Rapids voted to unionize. They were the first plants in the South to support a union. The union has since filed a charge with the National Labor Relations Board complaining that Stevens has refused to bargain in good faith as required by federal law.

Stevens said the pro-union vote represented only 7 per cent of its employees.

Bernhard's ties stir a wave of questions

Combined News Services

Disclosures that Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands retained links with Northrop Corp. as well as the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. have stirred a wave of questions in The Hague about the prince's financial dealings, his personal life and his ties to the CIA.

To senior Dutch officials as well as to journalists, the scandal involving Bernhard is still a jigsaw puzzle whose pieces have not yet fallen in place. "The question is why did he actually do this, was it greed, what was it?" asks one foreign ministry official.

The 65-year-old German-born prince earned a salary of $300,000 a year and is married to one of one world's richest women. Queen Juliana receives a tax-free salary of about $1.3 million and has a private fortune estimated at $12 million, although this may be a conservative estimate.

On the face of it, according to Dutch officials, Bernhard hardly needed money, yet by 1974 he told Lockheed that he was "bitter" that the company had not acknowledged his services and asked, somewhat petulantly, for a $1-million commission.

Carl A. Kotchian, Lockheed's former president, told a Senate hearing that "he (Bernhard) would lead you to believe that the queen has him on a tight budget.

"He usually said there were great demands upon him for charitable donations in Holland and internationally and he had a great interest in wildlife and he had to pay the money out for that," Kotchian said.

Bernhard — who was used by the government over the past three decades as an energetic royal salesman of Dutch goods — traveled widely and led a frenetic jet-set life compared with Queen Juliana, a matronly and shy royal figure.

British and Dutch newspapers have commented widely about his relationship with Countess Helene Lejeune — nicknamed "Poupette" — the daughter of a prominent surgeon. The countess lives in Paris.

Perhaps the most intriguing elements to the Bernhard mystery are his reported ties to the CIA.

One reliable source close to the government said that last February, when Premier Joop den Uyl asked Bernhard about the allegations that linked him to Lockheed, the prince laughed and denied any wrongdoing. Bernhard said, however: "If you would ask me about my relations with the CIA, that would be a different matter."

Kelley to wed ex-nun

Clarence M. Kelley, who got a vote of confidence as FBI director Saturday from President Ford, announced over the weekend that he plans to marry a former nun sometime this year.

At a Kansas City dinner in his honor Saturday night, Kelley said no date has been set for his marriage to Shirley Dyckes, who lives at the Watergate Complex in Washington. She is an elementary public-school teacher in Prince Georges County, Md.

Miss Dyckes, whom Kelley said he had known only five or six months, said she was a member of the Sisters of Holy Cross for 15 years. She would not reveal her age. She said she holds a master's degree in Latin American history from Catholic University.

Kelley, 64, said his future bride withdrew from the religious order about six years ago.

Kelley is a member of the Country Club Christian Church in Kansas City, where he was chief of police before being named head of the FBI in 1973.

Kelley's first wife, Ruby, died Nov. 9, 1975, of cancer after an extended illness. She was 64.

New church

An 85-year-old black woman breathed life into a 21-year-old dream in East Granby, Conn., Sunday as she led the first service in the church she built with her own money and her own hands.

"I hope this little baby being born today is not stillborn but may come of age with God's other churches," said Rushia West as she stood at the pulpit — an antique high-boy radio. A congregation of 85 whites and blacks joined in prayers and gospel hymns.

Mrs. West, who came from Smithfield, Ga., in 1917 to work in the cigar-tobacco fields of the Connecticut Valley, conceived the idea of a nondenominational church when her mother died in 1955. She fought the local zoning board and developers to see it completed.

The church is only the second in town and the first to be dedicated since 1840.

A warning

The American democratic society will be pulled down by forces of lawlessness and eventually be replaced by an authoritarian state unless the country gets millions of unemployed persons back to work, United Auto Workers president Leonard Woodcock said Sunday.

"You cannot have a democratic society and look into the future and see 7 per cent-plus unemployment, without having crime get out of control (and) having antisocial forces get out of control," Woodcock said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

He proposed as solutions to the problem a reduction in the current 40-hour week to create new job opportunities, and the remobilization of a National Youth Administration.

L.B. newsmen in jailing protest

FRESNO (AP) — About 100 persons demonstrated at the courthouse here Sunday to show solidarity with four Fresno Bee newsmen jailed for protecting a confidential source.

Among the marchers was a former reporter, U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston, who said he "first learned as a newsmen in Nazi Germany what happens when you lose freedom of the press." Cranston, D-Calif., was a news service reporter before entering politics.

The protesters included reporters from other parts of California, including a contingent from the Long Beach-Los Angeles area.

There were no shouted slogans or militant arm-waving as the group, accustomed to reporting about demonstrations instead of marching in them, walked quietly around the courthouse several times.

Some wore T-shirts emblazoned with "Free the Bee Four," and several carried signs supporting the newsmen, who were spending their third day in custody at an honor farm about 20 miles west of this central California city.

"I think it is an outrage that these four and others have to go to prison to protect the First Amendment rights of all of us," Cranston said.

He said reporting from confidential sources "led to the end of the Vietnam war and the revelations of Watergate."

A resolution supporting the Bee Four was adopted by a committee of the United Farm Workers Union at a political endorsement convention here.

The Bee Four, getting their first visits from friends and family since being jailed Friday, sent the demonstrators a message of thanks.

"We all share the same code of professional ethics," the jailed newsmen said.

One of the four, Fresno Bee reporter Joe Rosato, said Sunday in a telephone interview from the prison farm that he and the others found the biggest problem so far was learning the ropes and routines of prison life.

"Everything's so new to us," he said. "We're just finding our way around, which is not too difficult because we can't go anywhere."

The four, including managing editor George Gruener, 51, ombudsman James Bort, 51, reporter William Patterson, 49, and Rosato, 34, were jailed

Friday after a lengthy legal battle to get their open-ended sentences overturned.

They argued it was pointless to give them indefinite sentences to force them to reveal a confidential source, because they have promised they will never tell how they obtained material from a sealed transcript of a grand jury investigation. Their story about the bribery case against a Fresno city councilman was published in January 1975.

George Laine, president of the Los Angeles chapter of the American Newspaper Guild, said two dozen reporters and editors from the Los Angeles area were in Fresno.

Laine, an organizer of the demonstration, said they were joined by reporters and editors from San Francisco, San Jose, Sacramento, Stockton and Modesto.

The law says the four newsmen, as civil prisoners, must be kept separate from the honor farm's criminal inmates, all jailed on misdemeanor convictions.

Rosato said the four are restricted to one pathway outside their barracks. They eat in a room isolated from the others and they bunk together in a separate barracks.

"The closest other barracks are, say, 50 yards away," Rosato said. "The other inmates sit on the lawn and they look at us and we sit on the lawn and look at them."

Gruener said earlier he was glad the battle had moved to what may become a more public arena.

"A long, involved legal battle doesn't stir people," he said. "But when four men are put in jail for defending a principle, the public wants to know. 'Hey, what's going on here?'"

The sentence was imposed by Superior Court Hollis Best after the four refused to tell him how they got the material.

On Thursday, the California Supreme Court refused to hear their case and Friday, five hours after they checked into jail, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to delay their sentences pending an appeal there.

L.A. GIRL ABDUCTED, ASSAULTED

Associated Press

A badly beaten 21-year-old girl believed to have been kidnapped was found Sunday several blocks from her South Los Angeles home after an intensive search by police.

Antoinette Welch, who police said was sexually assaulted, was reported in fair condition at USC County Medical Center.

Police said the girl's parents last saw her when they put her to bed around midnight Saturday. An intruder apparently entered an open window in the bedroom.

Police were combing the area in which the girl was found at 11 a.m. in an effort to find her abductor.

$2 million heroin seized; 5 arrested

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A federal narcotics task force seized 15 pounds of heroin worth an estimated $2 million in a raid that ended with the arrest of five persons, authorities said Sunday.

Federal Drug Enforcement Administration agent Caron Durel said officers also confiscated 11 rifles and shotguns, eight handguns, $108,000 in cash and a variety of stereo equipment, televisions and other suspected stolen property.

Arrested Saturday afternoon were Raymond Moreno, 40; his wife Jody, 26; John Goodman, 22; Robert Van Deventer, 40; and Duane Dundas, 45, all of San Diego.

Durel said the five, being held in the federal correctional center in San Diego for investigation of possession of drugs, conspiracy to sell drugs and distribution of contraband, will be arraigned Tuesday.

He said the raid at the Moreno house followed a two-week investigation by officials in San Diego and New Orleans, the apparent destination of the drugs.

Using a search warrant, agents from the federal agency, the San Diego police and the county sheriff's department entered the house, allegedly finding heroin in several places, including a crawl space in the attic.

Durel said the house apparently was a major distribution center for drug traffic. He said "at least one other" arrest is expected in connection with the investigation.

Commuters surveyed

Lanes hit as bad gas-savers

Associated Press

Almost three-quarters of the commuters who regularly use the Santa Monica Freeway believe the Diamond Lane project was a poor way to conserve energy, a survey indicated Sunday.

The survey by Corey Research of Los Angeles said 494 persons who use the freeway were questioned about the car-pool lane experiment, which was ended by a court order Aug. 13.

The survey showed that 73.3 per cent believed the Diamond Lanes were a poor way to conserve energy, with 14.4 per cent rating the lanes fair and 10.7 per cent good.

An overwhelming 84.8 per cent said they would vote against the lanes if given the opportunity.

Sixty-nine per cent concluded it took them longer to reach their destination while the Diamond Lanes were in effect, but 8.9 per cent said the project made their traveling time shorter and 12.8 per cent said the lanes did not change traveling time.

Of those who believed their trips took longer, 28.2 per cent said the extra time was up to 10 minutes, 44.9 per cent said 20 minutes and 18.5 per cent said half an hour was added to traveling time.

Slightly more than 70 per cent said they sometimes avoided the freeway while the Diamond Lanes were in effect, using surface streets or other freeways.

The project, which reserved one lane of the freeway for use by car pools and buses, was intended to conserve energy and decrease traffic congestion by discouraging commuters from driving alone in cars.

U.S. Dist. Judge Matt Byrne ordered a halt to the project in response to a citizens' lawsuit.

Gunman hurts 3 in bar shootings

Three persons were shot early Sunday when a man who was banned from a Signal Hill bar fired a revolver into the crowded establishment, police said.

All three were reported in good condition at Long Beach Community Hospital, and a 29-year-old Rosemead man was later arrested in connection with the shootings.

Security guard William Dalzell, 28, who lives in a downtown Long Beach hotel, was hit once in the hip after he refused the gunman admittance to the Foothill Cafe, 1922 Cherry Ave.

Also injured were Barbara Neisler, 37, of 320 E. Fifth St., and Patrick Rooney, age unknown, of South Gate.

Police said Jaime Cruz of Rosemead was arrested about a block from the bar shortly after the 12:30 a.m. shooting and booked on charges of assault with intent to commit murder.

Officers were told the gunman fired a .32-caliber revolver into the bar, which held more than 100 persons.

Cypress girl wounded; 'mistaken for coyote'

A 17-year-old Cypress girl camping in an Oregon park was accidentally wounded by a man who thought he was shooting at a coyote, authorities said Sunday.

Debra Wilkerson, of 4742 Marion Circle, was about to go to sleep in Big Creek County Park, east of Astoria, Saturday night when she heard three gunshots.

Two of the bullets narrowly missed her head, and the third struck her in the shoulder.

Oregon State Police reported that an Astoria man, Daniel Bartlett, told them he had fired shots at what he thought was a coyote.

Miss Wilkerson said she would not press charges. She was treated at an Astoria hospital and released.

Harbor City resident killed

Charles S. Blackman, of 1430 Pacific Coast Highway, was pronounced dead at the scene by a county coroner in Ripley, N.Y.

According to Chautauque County deputies, Blackman was under the vehicle making repairs and asked his wife to give it some gas. The gear slipped into reverse and the motor home backed over Blackman's chest. No charges were filed, deputies said.

Youth killed in party stabbing

SIMI VALLEY (AP) — A 16-year-old Simi Valley youth was fatally stabbed in the chest early Sunday at what police said was a drinking party and a 17-year-old youth was booked for investigation of murder.

Police declined to identify the suspect in the killing of Scott Alan Hall. They said 40 youths were at the party, but the motive for the stabbing was not known.

Royal treatment

Are property owners who receive royalties from oil wells on their property entitled to the 22 per cent oil depletion allowance? F.O.H., Wilmington.

You may be entitled to the depletion allowance, but you'll have to check with the oil company issuing your royalty checks to be sure. A royalty recipient may qualify for the depletion allowance if the yield from the oil wells on his lot or from the oil field which includes his property does not exceed 1,800 barrels daily, explained a spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service. You should check with the oil company that pays your royalties to determine the daily oil yield for your area. The oil and gas depletion allowance was enacted in 1929 to spur the exploration of petroleum resources. It allowed oil companies to deduct 22 per cent from their gross income before paying taxes. This allowance was eliminated last year for the largest oil companies—those with annual incomes exceeding $35 million. Petroleum companies earning less than $7 million a year are still allowed the full oil depletion allowance, and a partial exemption is permitted those companies whose annual earnings fall between $7 million and $35 million. The depletion allowance gradually is being phased out altogether, with the daily oil yield and the daily oil-field limit that determines eligibility being lowered each year.

Social Security

My mother is retired and is receiving her own Social Security benefits. My father died recently and she will be getting a life insurance settlement soon. She also may get a cash settlement from a pending lawsuit. Will her Social Security payments be reduced to compensate for this additional income? R.V., Long Beach.

No. Income from sources such as insurance or lawsuit settlements, gifts or income tax refunds does not affect an individual's Social Security retirement benefits. Only money earned through employment must be reported to the Social Security Administration, said a spokesman for that agency's Long Beach office. However, recipients of Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits must report any additional income or earnings, he said, and their benefits will be reduced to compensate for the additional money received.

Old sport

I would like to know if there is any age limit for participation in the Olympics. Does a person who starts a sport late in life, such as in his twenties, have a chance to compete in the Olympics if he is good at his sport? H.S., Long Beach.

There are no minimum or maximum age limits for the Olympics, said a spokesman for the U.S. Olympic Committee headquarters in New York, but it is suggested that young girls not participate in the gymnastics event until they are 14 years old. Most American competitors are young because it is while they are in school that they have the time, energy and financial backing for the extensive training necessary for competition. But if a person excels in a sport, no matter what his age, he is eligible to try out for the regional Olympic trials. One of the oldest contenders in the Montreal Olympics in July was a 48-year-old Canadian, Alex Oakley, who competed in his fifth Olympics this year. He never has won a medal, and this year in his event, the 20-kilometer walk, he finished 35th in a field of 36. In the 1972 Olympics, a 72-year-old athlete from Monaco competed in the skeet-shooting event.

Ford and Carter trade jabs as warmup to campaign kickoff

By CHRIS FRENCH
Associated Press

President Ford and challenger Jimmy Carter jabbed at each other in magazine interviews released Sunday as Carter prepared formally to open his Democratic campaign today.

Ford has delayed for a week the formal start of his campaign to return to the White House.

CARTER will deliver his kick-off speech from the front porch of the vacation cottage of Franklin D. Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga. Two of Roosevelt's sons, Franklin Jr. and James, are expected to be on hand.

In separate interviews published in this week's issue of U.S. News & World Report, Ford said Carter would add $100 billion to federal spending, while the Democratic presidential nominee labeled Ford a "dormant, inactive President."

Ford provided no details to support his charge, but he cited as an example what he called Carter's support for creation of a consumer protection agency, which Ford said was "totally unnecessary."

Carter said he felt the Ford administration is free of any taint of Watergate, "but, as far as just adopting what Nixon's policies were and continuing them, I don't think there's any doubt that there's been absolute continuity there."

In the opening speech of the campaign, Carter was expected to emphasize some of the general themes that have dominated his campaign — the need for new leadership, fresh ideas and vision, and the restoration of trust in Washington.

Carter planned to say that President Ford is incapable of meeting the needs because he is part of the problem.

Sen. Ford's running mate, Sen. Bob Dole, said over the weekend that he was questioned by federal prosecutors in another matter involving allegedly illegal contributions from Gulf Oil Corp.

Dole said he did not know if that meant he was being investigated, but he acknowledged he was called before a grand jury March 8 on the matter.

DOLE said he never received any illegal funds from Gulf — either directly or through Pennsylvania Republican Hugh Scott, the Senate minority leader.

Scott has been accused of receiving up to $100,000 from Gulf lobbyist Claude C. Wild Jr. between 1960 and 1973.

Scott has said he never knowingly accepted corporate funds from Gulf. Such donations are illegal. Scott also said whatever money he received was used for his campaigns and those of other GOP senators.

In an airport news conference Saturday in Warwick, R.I., Dole said that special prosecutors had visited him in February and had asked him to go before a federal grand jury investigating the Gulf matter.

Few upsets seen in four primaries

Associated Press

Four states hold congressional primaries Tuesday with few surprises expected.

The race attracting the most attention involves Rep. Robert Sikes, a Florida Democrat recently reprimanded by the House for failing to disclose a possible conflict of interest involving financial dealings and his chairmanship of the military construction appropriations subcommittee. He faces a challenge from John Benton Jr. of Panama City.

IN ARIZONA, Rep. Morris Udall, who lost his race for the Democratic presidential nomination, is opposed in his renomination bid, but is expected to win.

His opponent, Tucson City Councilman Ruben Romero, says, "I think it's time we gave Democrats a choice."

Republicans and Democrats in Arizona are also holding primaries to select nominees for the U.S. Senate seat being given up by retiring Sen. Paul Fannin.

Reps. Sam Steiger, 47, and John Conlan, 46, are seeking the GOP nomination. In the Democratic Senate primary, Carolyn Warner, 46, the state education superintendent; Dennis DeConcini, 39, and former state Atty. Gen. Wade Church, 68, are running for the nomination.

House Minority Leader John Rhodes of the 1st District faces a weak challenge from Louis Stradling, 59, a fellow Mesa, Ariz., resident, and city council member.

Pat Pullinwider, a Tempe housewife, is running unopposed for the Democratic nomination which she won in 1974.

In Nevada, Democratic Sen. Howard Cannon is expected to defeat his two challengers for renomination, C. Hardison Cundiff of Las Vegas and Rowena von Wolff of Fernley. Three Republicans are seeking their party's nomination. They are former congressman David Towell of Minden, Sam Cavnar and Robert Charles, both of Las Vegas.

There is also one contested congressional primary in Connecticut, along with a gubernatorial primary in North Dakota.

Carter seen as voters' 'own'

By LOUIS HARRIS

The voters may have given Jimmy Carter a sizeable lead over Gerald Ford at this point in the campaign, but they seem to feel that the President's, rather than Carter's, political philosophy is closer to their own.

This would seem to be a disadvantage for Carter, but he manages to offset it by coming across as more conservative to conservative voters, more middle of the road to middle of the roaders, and more liberal to liberals. He has demonstrated a remarkable ability to make voters of each ideological stripe believe he is one of their own.

THIS MAY BE CHANGING, however. In the month after Carter was nominated, the number of voters who view him as "liberal" went up from 20 to 26 per cent, while those describing him as "conservative" dropped from 19 to 17 per cent, and "middle of the road" from 38 to 31 per cent. The 57 per cent majority who thought that Carter was either a moderate or conservative in July declined to 48 per cent in August.

At the same time, 72 per cent of the electorate sees President Ford as either "conservative" (36 per cent) or "middle of the road" (36 per cent). By contrast, only 5 per cent think he is a "liberal." Voters see him as slightly less conservative with the passage of time.

All of this becomes quite revealing when it is seen in the light of how voters view themselves. Thirty one per cent view themselves as conservative, 41 per cent as middle of the road, 18 per cent as liberal, and 3 per cent as radical left.

CARTER'S KNACK FOR appealing to different groups can be seen in these findings: Although 17 per cent of all voters think he is a conservative, a higher 24 per cent of conservatives see him as one of their own. Compared to the 31 per cent of the country which identifies Carter as middle of the road, a much higher 39 per cent of the middle of the roaders think Carter shares their views. While 26 per cent of all voters consider Carter liberal, a much higher 39 per cent of all liberals do.

Whether Carter can continue to achieve this kind of differing appeal to different segments of the political spectrum may be one of the keys to the ultimate outcome of the election.

Ironically, the biggest disparity in the perception of Carter's political philosophy exists in the South, where he holds a commanding 68 to 28 per cent lead. In the South, 38 per cent of the voters view themselves as conservatives and another 36 per cent as middle of the road. Yet, only 19 per cent of southerners believe Carter to be conservative, while 26 per cent think of him as middle of the road. And although only 12 per cent of all southerners see themselves as liberals, 29 per cent believe Carter is liberal. In the South, Carter will be testing regional pride and loyalty against considerable differences over political philosophy.

PAST HARRIS SURVEYS have shown that such neat classifications as "liberal" or "conservative" no longer fit political thinking in this country. Politicians and political journalists tend to see far more significance in ideology than the public does. A recent Harris Survey showed that only 43 per cent of the American people preferred to choose a candidate for president on the basis of his ideology, while the rest of the electorate votes according to which candidate will most improve the quality of life.

In an odd way, however, political philosophy has been a key element in this year's elective process. At the Republican convention there was a good deal of talk about whether Gerald Ford was committed enough to a conservative approach to pass muster with the Reagan wing of the party. Among the Democrats, a constant chorus heard in the North is whether Jimmy Carter is willing to bend enough in a liberal direction to satisfy the ideological wishes of the liberal wing.

On an overall basis, President Ford is as conservative as the country as a whole, while Jimmy Carter is considerably less conservative, less middle of the road and more liberal than the general population.

Health Questions and Answers

HIRING A PAINTER MAY BE CHEAPER THAN TREATING NECK AND BACK PAIN

Q. Doctor, I think I've really done something to myself. I decided to paint my ceilings and when I got to the last room, I developed a severe pain in my neck, have a headache and I think bursitis in both shoulders.

What's more, every time I raise my head or bend it over I have a sharp excruciating pain in my low back. Could this painting have done all this to me? What should I do?

A. I think you "have really done something to yourself." In fact, without your help, this is one of the most serious spine-nerve situations that can occur. And, before I go further, I want to emphasize the absolute necessity of early and immediate treatment before this condition sets up permanent and irreversible effects.

Q. What actually happened to me to cause this?

A. Your neck is a delicate supporting structure which must function without stabilizing bony supports. In its strength it is relatively weak since the 8-10 pounds of weight of the head becomes a constant threat to the continued stability of the neck. A chief function of the neck is to keep the head balanced over a central point in the low back (sacral foundation) and prolonged positions such as you have used in painting your ceiling distorts this delicate balance and often ruins what structural support the muscles and ligaments produce, thus destroying stability and putting harmful stress of the spinal cord and nerves.

Q. How did this happen in my case?

A. As you elevate your neck and head to paint your ceilings the head is tilted backward and its weight is off-center. The neck then is called upon to do something it can't do very long. After a short period of time in this position, the muscles and ligaments become exhausted and SOMETHING IN THE NECK HAS TO GIVE! Usually the top (atlas) vertebra which is supposed to be parallel or nearly level to the floor goes up in front 20 or 30 degrees. This is because the weight of the head has shifted its center of gravity to the back of the atlas. The back head tilt position and the exhausted or sprained muscles and ligaments cause a severe stress to the spinal cord and nerves coming through its central canal and going to all parts of the body. When a person is hung, he dies very quickly because of an even more exaggerated position of the atlas slipped up and pinching the spinal cord. Most people with the atlas angle remaining 25-30 degrees or more become permanently disabled. So, I feel that this is what you have done to yourself and needless to say immediate Precision Chiropractic diagnosis and treatment are vital.

PROFILE OF JIMMY CARTER

Parham recalls: "All of us learned that when you were called to his office you'd better be ready to tick off your points. He'd then say his mind and the meeting was over."

Next to small talk and desultory discussions, Carter dislikes long, poorly-prepared memos. He demands neatly typed memos no more than two pages long and to the point.

The governor usually wrote his own comments in the upper right-hand corner of the page and returned it — sometimes, to the embarrassment of the author, after correcting spelling and grammatical errors.

He used memos to reach into the state bureaucracy to cajole, reprimand, prod, persuade, soothe and, on many occasions, to compliment.

"Don't tell me things I already know," he scribbled on a memo from one state planner. On others he wrote, "Don't give me a bunch of bull. Give me what I need." Or, when pressing for new ideas, "Be bold."

Trip to hunting lodge laid on

Carter also seemed to know when "ego-stroking" was necessary. He sometimes wrote sentimental notes to staffers and state officials about how much he appreciated their hard work for him.

"You have a tough job and I'm your friend," he wrote to one frustrated state planner. "Come by to see me."

On the whole, Carter's administration was one of the most reform-minded and scandal-free in Georgia's recent history. But, according to his gubernatorial papers, he and his aides did not always live up to the high standards of openness, candor and ethical purity his campaign brochures claim he would bring to the White House.

As governor, Carter generally got good marks for openness from newsmen and legislators. He proposed a financial disclosure bill for public officials, released copies of his income tax returns, and held regular news conferences.

BUT CARTER was not above closing the door on the decision-making process of the governor's office when it suited his purpose.

In 1971, Atlanta Constitution political editor Bill Shipp wrote that Carter "acts as if reorganization of state government was a private matter between him, a handful of business consultants and some planners from Macon who don't know the difference between corrections and pardon and paroles."

Carter had personally escorted Shipp and two other reporters out of his office when they showed up to cover a meeting between the governor and a group of business consultants on reorganization.

CARTER ALSO has made honesty and forthrightness campaign issues, but some legislators and statehouse reporters say the former governor was not always a model of these virtues.

For example, Carter lashed out at the state senate at a news conference, and when The Atlanta Constitution reported his remarks, some senators were furious.

Carter immediately got out a personal letter to each senator claiming he had been misquoted by the paper's Celestine Sibley.

When word got back to the governor that Sibley's story was supported by a tape-recording of the news conference, Carter called the reporter to his office and privately apologized.

HOWEVER, he never publicly changed his position.

While legislators and reporters often felt the sting of Carter's anger, it was the lobbyists who seemed to provoke the governor's temper most.

Carter denounced lobbyists and their organizations by name when they tried to obstruct his programs. At one point, he said he had considered seeking a court injunction to bar lobbyists from the State Capitol when the Legislature was in session.

In 1973, Carter unsuccessfully pushed an ethics bill which would have clamped down on the "winning and dining" of state lawmakers by lobbyists. "We ought to be extremely cautious of doing things like that," he said.

However, Carter himself apparently had no qualms about accepting the free use of hunting lodges owned by large Georgia paper companies. He arranged through their lobbyists to entertain some of his friends and political associates.

ACCORDING to Carter's gubernatorial records, the governor in March 1973, invited a group of friends and supporters to join him for a weekend at the Palmetto Bluff Hunting Lodge near Beaufort, S.C., owned by the Union Camp Corp.

A few months later he invited a similar group to the Cabin Bluff Hunting Lodge near Brunswick, Ga. The lodge is owned by the Brunswick Paper and Pulp Co. and was made available through Lucian A. Whittle, the company's lobbyist.

Both companies at the time were being pressed by state and federal authorities to clean up their air and water pollution. While there is no evidence that either firm ever asked for or received special treatment from state anti-pollution officials, they clearly had reason to want to be on as friendly terms as possible with the governor.

But if anything, the state pressure on pollution increased during the Carter administration.

In planning the Cabin Bluff weekend, Frank

Moore, the governor's administrative assistant, wrote a memo asking Carter to bend his rules on the use of state park rangers as escorts and guides for special groups.

Moore noted that the lodge had a well-stocked bar, but said it lacked adequate recreational facilities to keep the governor's 26 guests from getting bored.

"I know your feelings about the use of State Game and Fish equipment and personnel for VIP trips," Moore wrote the governor, "but would you object to my asking Joe Tanner (head of the Department of Natural Resources) to arrange a tour of Cumberland Island or some similar activity related to this part of the coast, possibly using a private boat and one DNR ranger?"

Missing list of contributors

Carter did not object.

Records also show that Carter took free rides on corporate jets, including those furnished by the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. and the Coca-Cola Co., and on at least one occasion accepted the use of a car and driver in New York provided by a lobbyist for a major pharmaceutical firm.

Carter aides contend that the trips were made on state business and saved the taxpayers' money. The state, however, provides transportation funds for the governor when he travels on state business. It also maintains a small fleet of aircraft with trained pilots for use by state officials.

Carter flew on the Coca-Cola corporate jet to a number of governors' conferences. In April of 1972, he used a Lockheed Jetstar executive jet to make a three-week trip around Latin America. Carter described it as a routine trade mission promoting Georgia products, including Lockheed Aircraft.

On Sept. 9, 1971, Carter attended a United Nations Conference on the Human Environment in New York. His schedule noted that a car and driver would be at his disposal, compliments of Travis Stewart, a Washington-based lobbyist for Hoffman-La Roche Inc., a major pharmaceutical company.

It is true that other governors have accepted such favors without raising any eyebrows. They are noteworthy in Carter's case perhaps only because of his statements that public officials should avoid even the appearance of conflicts of interest.

There has never been any evidence that Carter did any special favors for any of the companies involved.

A sore spot with Carter is any mention of his refusal to release the names of corporations and individuals who contributed to his 1970 gubernatorial campaign.

In that race, Carter portrayed himself as a man of the people and his chief opponent, former Gov. Carl Sanders, as the candidate of the Atlanta business establishment. Asked at a 1970 news conference if he had accepted any corporate campaign contributions, Carter admitted that he had, but he refused to say how much or from whom.

Corporate contributions were, and still are, legal in Georgia, but since 1974 candidates have been required to report them under a disclosure law sponsored by Carter.

Carter claims his campaign did not keep complete records in 1970. However, Richard Harden and Bill Lynch, two Atlanta accountants who worked in the campaign, told Capitol Hill News Service that records were kept on every penny that came into the campaign.

"The contributions were automated," said Harden, who served as Carter's welfare department head. "They kept them on a computer, and there were monthly print-outs of all contributors."

In 1972, Sam Nunn, a young state legislator, discovered how sensitive this issue was with Carter. Nunn successfully challenged Carter's appointee to the U.S. Senate, Atlanta attorney and former Carter campaign treasurer David Gambrell. During the campaign, Nunn called on Carter to reveal how much Gambrell's wealthy family had contributed to the governor's 1970 campaign.

Carter was furious. "Dear Sam," he wrote Nunn. "I've never been so surprised or disappointed in anyone before. I just don't understand you."

Nunn won anyway.

Opening party benefits League

A gala preview party Thursday benefiting Assistance League of Long Beach will precede the public opening Friday of new Buifums Marina Pacifica store.

The party, featuring buffet dinner and no-host bar, is planned from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. The doors of the waterfront store open to customers at 10 a.m. the next day.

Providing musical entertainment for preview guests will be Sunshine Express and the Frank Lester Trio. Magic Castle performers, Bruce Cervon, sleight of hand artist, and Ron Wilson, will present magic tricks throughout the evening.

Among prizes to be awarded are a seven-day cruise for two, a $750 women's wardrobe, a milk stroller, a Cuisinart Food Processor and a four piece Wallace silver tea set and warmer.

Tickets at $12.50 per person are available from Mrs. Joseph Smith, 600 Ultima Ave., Long Beach 90804.

THE NEW Marina Pacifica store, which eventually will have a boat dock, is adjacent to a foot bridge from the Marina Pacifica residential complex. The store has 40,000 square feet inside on two levels, doubling the space and merchandise of the former Buifums Marina store.

Additions not in the former Marina store are a full service beauty studio, fine jewelry, furs, gourmet cookware, housewares, luggage, bedding and bath, foundations and children's clothing departments, plus a tennis shop.

Chay and Johnson Associates did the interior design, which features exposed wooden beams, ceramic tile floors interspersed with brick, a sculptured chandelier on the upper level and mirrored and stained glass wall panels.

Manager of the new store is Kay Humfeld.

DEAR ABBY

Nickname—many meanings

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In reading about your 40th high school reunion, we were most interested in learning that your nickname is "Popo."

We lived for a while in Micronesia (a Pacific Island) where Truskee is spoken, and "popo" in Truskee means "pregnant."

We have a loyal and sensitive dog, which we appropriately named Popo. Just thought you would like to know about your namesake.

DIANE DEAR DIANE: Thanks. I have several other namesakes. Popo is short for Popocatepetel, a volcano in Mexico. And it's also the German word for that which one usually falls.

DEAR ABBY: My only grandchildren (a boy, 14, and a girl, 15) live in a distant state, and I always remember them handsomely at Christmastime.

Last March I received a letter from their mother (my daughter-in-law) that said, "Barby and Sonny have asked me to thank you for your fabulous Christmas gifts, and they're terribly ashamed that they never got around to thanking you themselves."

I replied to that letter as follows: "As far as I'm concerned, Barby and Sonny have not as yet acknowledged my Christmas gifts properly; furthermore, they are old enough to write their own thank-you notes, and it's high time they learned some manners."

Next thing I knew, I got a snippy letter from my daughter-in-law, saying, "If you're going to make such a big deal out of thank-you notes, please don't send the children any more presents."

Abby, you know perfectly well that I am not going to forget my grandchildren at Christmastime. Was I wrong to complain?

HURT NANA DEAR HURT: Yes. And your daughter-in-law was also wrong to have written that snippy letter. What motivates your giving? Is it the pleasure of giving? Or the pleasure of being thanked?

There is no excuse for the rudeness your grandchildren showed, but if their lack of appreciation irritates you, you should tell THEM, not their mother.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 9 years old and I want a horse more than anything in this world! Dad said, "You can have a horse if you can pay for it, plus all the equipment and the upkeep."

The horse I want costs $150, but I don't have the money. I don't get an allowance, and I can't earn money doing chores for the neighbors because they say I'm too young and I might get hurt.

I can't earn any money doing chores around my own house because my folks say I live here and should do whatever I can for nothing.

HORSE-CRAZY IN INDIANA

DEAR HORSE-CRAZY: I'm afraid you will have to be patient until you are able to EARN the money — unless you can persuade your dad to lend it to you with the understanding that you will repay him when you become a wage earner.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 68700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Cards offered

A public card party offering bridge, canasta and pinochle is planned Wednesday noon in the parish hall of St. Lucy Church, Santa Fe Avenue and 23rd Street, sponsored by the Altar Society. A $1.25 donation is asked.

Tough N.Y. drug law a failure, report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal study has concluded that New York state's tough 1973 drug law put fewer people in prison in each of its first two years of operation than did the old, more lenient law.

The study by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration also said that tough mandatory penalties in the law, including up to life terms for the most serious drug offenses, did not prove a deterrent, and that the speed in which cases were handled in the courts did not improve.

NEW YORK CITY courts, under the new law, built up a backlog of cases that stopped growing only in the last quarter of 1975, the study said.

The new law was passed in 1973. The study, released Sunday, was for the years 1974 and 1975.

This year, partly in response to the trends cited in the report, the New York Legislature significantly weakened the law's restrictions on plea-bargaining and made it possible for most small-time heroin sellers to avoid the law's life-sentence provisions. There are no figures available on what effect those changes have had.

Under the more stringent provisions of the law, prison sentences were required for all drug felonies, except those involving marijuana. For many Class A felony convictions, most of which involve heroin, a life sentence was mandated.

Restrictions were placed on the amount of plea bargaining that was permitted, and drug offenses were reclassified by lowering the amount of drugs required to qualify a crime as a felony.

The LEAA report said that the 1973 law will be judged successful if the risk of punishment facing offenders increases, the number of offenders sentenced to prison increases and the speed with which cases are processed improves.

"During the first two years the new drug and sentencing laws were in effect, none of these key indicators of successful implementation have been evident," it said.

In 1973, under the old law, an estimated 1,560 defendants went to prison on conviction of drug charges. Under the new law, in 1974 the number sent to prison was less than 1,100 and in 1975 an estimated 1,433 were sentenced, the report said.

The report said that by the end of 1975 about $55 million had been spent on court-related resources, including more judges, to implement the law.

Still, the report said that, especially in New York City, it took a long time to process cases. This was partly the result of having more trials since plea bargaining was restricted, the study said.

JET HIJACKERS QUIT

were driven to the terminal in the first busload of released hostages, then transferred to a police car, which sped off toward Nicosia, 30 miles away. A Libyan embassy official was in the car.

Airport officers said it was understood the hijackers would receive safe passage from Cyprus to a country of their choice.

The Israelis had refused to accept any communication from the hijackers and blocked the runways of Ben-Gurion Airport in Tel Aviv with vehicles to keep the plane from landing there. Israel has a policy of refusing demands by hijackers and terrorists.

The Israeli prisoners listed by the Arabs included Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capudji, convicted of smuggling arms into Israel, and Japanese Red Army terrorist Kozo Okamoto, who took part in the 1972 Lod Airport massacre in which 26 people died. The other six all had Arab names.

Most of the passengers were Dutch tourists returning from vacations in Spain and France, the airline said. There were two Americans, 13 Spaniards, five French, two Moroccans, two Indonesians, a West German, a Belgian, two Finns and three Arabs on the passenger list.

The KLM plane was taken over 20 minutes

after it left Nice, France, on a flight to Amsterdam. It flew to Tunisia, where it was refueled. It then flew the 1,300 miles here.

The Israeli army said the hijacked jet flew to within 100 miles of Tel Aviv, where two jet interceptors rose to meet it. The hijackers turned back to Cyprus.

Before landing here the second time, the Arabs radioed detailed instructions on the release of the Israeli prisoners. They said the eight must be put aboard a plane out of Israel and a prearranged code word transmitted by representatives of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) and relayed to the hijackers.

Even in the dry, rocky Chryse Basin, Viking 1's experiments have not ruled out life. A series of experiments have been repeated there and rechecked. Radioactive tracers injected into the soil still show up in gases emitted by the sample when it is heated, indicating at least the possibility of life.

Despite the major differences scientists hope to find in Utopia, the flat, rocky plain appeared in photographs very much like Viking 1's home base.

MARSQUAKE PROBES

organic compounds in the red Utopia soil. Those essential compounds seem to be the "missing link" in Viking 1's search for life.

Several of Viking 1's biology experiments have suggested the presence of life, but no organics have actually been found.

The Utopia region was chosen for its relatively smooth surface and because its climate was considered more favorable for finding life, the basic purpose of the Viking missions. Scientists say the arid Chryse Basin where Viking 1 rests may be partly to blame for the craft's inconclusive probes for life. Utopia, 4,600 miles away, is moister and theoretically more hospitable for life.

If all Viking 2's equipment works properly, scoops of moist soil will be deposited in correct amounts inside a miniature laboratory where various tests will be performed to find any living as well as nonliving properties of Mars.

STORM

others dropped out with minor injuries.

In holiday traffic, California was second in the nation in numbers of highway fatalities with 25, led by Texas with 29.

The National Safety Council reported that nationwide 313 persons had been killed by 11 p.m. Sunday, well ahead of minimum predictions to that hour in the holiday weekend. Last year, 407 traffic deaths occurred over Labor Day weekend.

ONLY ONE traffic fatality had been reported in Los Angeles and Orange counties by late Sunday.

It occurred Saturday when 23-year-old Luis Romero of Rosemead tried to jump into a car that was fleeing from La Vita Terrace and Wallace Avenue after it collided with another vehicle, officers said. Romero was pronounced dead at the scene.

A 41-year-old Los Angeles man thought to be a traffic fatality when he was killed on the Pasadena Freeway late Friday was instead the victim of a gunshot wound, police said Sunday.

Highway Patrol officers originally speculated that James Waer was crushed to death when his car bounded from the guard rail into the air, hit an embankment and landed upside down on the freeway. But an autopsy released late Sunday determined he had been shot.

In another incident, a highway patrol officer was injured when his motorcycle was hit by a car driven by an allegedly drunken driver.

OFFICER J. Tucker, 33, was treated at Huntington Memorial Hospital in Pasadena for a fractured right leg, a fractured left arm and multiple cuts.

Reginald Bendit, 27, of Altadena, was booked on suspicion of felony drunken driving in the accident. He was not injured.

The National Weather Service predicted variable cloudiness today throughout Southern California, with expected high and low temperatures of 78 and 68 at Long Beach. Desert highs were expected to range from 90 at Apple Valley to 102 at Palm Springs, with highs in the 70s in the mountains.

Advocates of "clothing-optional" beaches will gather at Venice Beach today for the third day of "Nude Beach Weekend."

A group called Beachfront U.S.A. will circulate petitions in support of nude bathing in a designated area near Pirates Cove in Malibu.

Bus strike starting to take toll on noncommuters, too

By BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writer

The Southern California Rapid Transit District strike enters its third week today with no end in sight, and the walkout by bus drivers and mechanics is beginning to take its toll on the Southland's 7 million residents.

In monetary terms, the total losses are almost impossible to estimate. Commuters spend money on alternative forms of transportation and employees are laid off at restaurants and retail stores that depend heavily on public transit for their customers.

AT ONE downtown Los Angeles department store, sales have dropped 20 per cent since the strike began despite the back-to-school season; by next week the store's losses could total $2 million to $3 million, an economist estimated.

The cost of the stalemate in social terms cannot be measured, either. No price tag can be put on the inconvenience to those who depend on public transportation for a way to get to jobs, stores and medical services. Nor can it be known how many health problems can be directly related to air pollution from heavier freeway traffic.

When the strike finally ends, it may take a long time for things to get back to normal. People change their routines during strikes and do not always return to their old habits at the end of a walkout.

Walt Thompson, RTD spokesman, said Sunday it will take "at least two days" to get the district's 2,400 buses running again when the strike is over. Currently, nonunion supervisory personnel are handling routine bus maintenance, such as charging batteries and running engines, he said.

Thompson said the 11-member RTD board of directors is standing by its original pre-strike offer of a 19.5 per cent wage and fringe benefits increase for drivers and 18.24 per cent for mechanics and maintenance workers.

There were no new developments in the strike over the Labor Day weekend, Thompson added. Members of the Amalgamated Transit Union (ATU), representing almost 1,100 RTD mechanics and maintenance personnel, voted Friday to accept a compromise 21 per cent package hammered out earlier in the week at talks also attended by county supervisors and the state conciliator.

THE RTD BOARD will meet to "discuss this issue" Wednesday.

"I won't speculate what the board will do," Thompson said, "but it was misleading for the ATU to submit the 21 per cent figure to its membership for a vote under those conditions when the RTD hasn't even offered that figure."

Little money separates the unions and management. Union officials estimate it amounts to only $200 a year for each of the district's 5,000 drivers, members of the United Transportation Union.

Americans are on the move, and process can be perilous

Associated Press

The semiannual migration of Americans from one city to another is in full swing as families try to get settled in new homes before the start of the school year.

The Interstate Commerce Commission says there were more than 1.2 million household moves last year. There are no specifics on how much the relocations cost, but a commission spokesman estimated the total at a little over $1 billion, or about $330 for each move.

Ray Atherton, chief of the ICC's Household Goods Branch, said moving is a highly seasonal business, with spring and fall booms timed to the closing and opening of school.

Atherton said the commission receives about 1,000 complaints a month on moving troubles. The most common problem is loss and damage. He said the number of complaints has remained steady over recent years, although the number of shipments has increased.

For the consumer, moving can be an expensive proposition, particularly over long distances.

Interstate movers, licensed by the ICC, base charges on weight and distance. There is usually a given rate per 100 pounds that increases with distance. While local truckers often charge by the hour, time is not a price factor in most long-distance moves.

A cross-country move from New York to Los Angeles for a three-bedroom house with about 7,500 pounds of furniture will probably cost at least $2,500 to $3,000, Atherton said.

A MAJOR decision for most people is whether to pack their household goods themselves or let the movers do it. "You can save considerable money by doing it yourself," Atherton said, adding that having the movers pack can add $500 or more to the price of an average move.

If you do your own packing, Atherton explained, it is up to you to prove negligence by the company if something is damaged. If the movers pack, the burden of proof is on the company.

Packing your own possessions takes time. Atherton said that anyone who wants to do his own packing had better set aside every evening for a week or so. Some people, however, actually do a better job of packing than professional movers. "I've moved three times and I always do my own packing," Atherton said. "I've never had a teacup broken."

Interstate movers have a basic liability of 60 cents per pound. That means that you'll get only 60 cents if a one-pound vase is broken — even if the vase is expensive crystal. You can purchase additional coverage, paying $5 for every extra $1,000 worth of liability protection.

There are some things that you should never trust to the movers, Atherton said, citing jewelry, coin or stamp collections and personal papers.

In accordance with ICC regulations, some 2,500 household moving companies filed reports on their performance in 1975 — including information on everything from the number of shipments handled to the percentage of delayed deliveries.

THE ICC requires each moving company that operates on an interstate basis to give a copy of its performance report to prospective customers, giving consumers a chance to compare several firms.

"KNOW YOUR PORT SERIES"; NUMBER FIVE

Where do cargos come from?

You may be surprised when you read the "top ten" list below. Among the leaders in cargo tonnage of foreign origin are a few names you might not expect.

With 67 percent of total Port of Long Beach commerce being of a foreign nature, the Port divides the outside world into five major foreign trade regions.

The largest share of activity belongs to a combination region called the "Pacific Basin"—which includes all countries bordering the Pacific Ocean, with the exception of the USSR which is included in Europe.

Here's how the 19.8 million tons of foreign cargo—both inbound and outbound—divided up by geographic area last year:

Far East	10.2
Europe	2.9
Middle East	2.2
Latin America	2.1
Africa	1.9
Canada	.5

The top ten foreign trade customers of the Port by total tonnage:

Japan	4,280,340
Indonesia	2,328,431
Iran	1,628,422
Netherlands	1,253,401
Ecuador	1,046,399
Hong Kong	968,283
Korea	814,066
Republic of China	735,659
Mexico	573,207
Nigeria	525,877

European and Middle Eastern trade has claimed a significantly larger share of the totals in recent years and both now have passed South America in tonnage. The current apportionment among regions and nations is not expected to change significantly until China and Russia enter the trade market more vigorously.

Another 33 percent of your Port's commerce is classified as either "coastwise" or "intercoastal" cargo. All West Coast ports are our "coastwise" customers. U.S. ports on other coasts—such as New York, Norfolk, Houston, New Orleans, Tampa—are classified as "intercoastal" customers, as well as such offshore domestic ports as Hawaii, Guam and Alaska.

Let's not overlook the immediate "neighborhood." The next largest area of Port cargo market activity is the 14 southernmost counties of California, an area of 78,885 square miles. For every one of the 13.9 million residents in this region, the Port last year handled over two tons of cargo.

Add in the third market segment—the six adjacent western states—and altogether the total Port market area involves 26 million Western Americans. For every resident of the West the Port of Long Beach moved over one ton of cargo last year.

The Port has its work cut out for it. As the foreign commerce leader of the West, your Port of Long Beach will continue to grow to meet the demands of worldwide cargo transportation.

Seniors put love in life of children 'Grandparents' get extra income, too

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

Rita Quick, Benny Fox and Twyla Priester are all senior citizens living on fixed incomes. But the three of them, plus about 90 colleagues, have an unusual source of income that sets them apart from other seniors.

They get paid for being grandparents.

And in the bargain, they get a special satisfaction and renewed purpose in life from spending 20 hours each week with mentally, emotionally and physically handicapped children at Fairview State Hospital in Costa Mesa.

All belong to the hospital's federally funded Foster Grandparent Program, a plan designed to bolster the income of senior citizens while providing one-to-one companionship for some of the facility's patients.

The foster grandparents, who must be at least 60 years old, in good health and have an income of less than $304 per month, work with their charges four hours a day, five days a week.

THEY EARN $1.60 an hour, tax free, and are given a free lunch each day and allotted $1.75 a day for transportation.

In addition, they receive paid holidays, insurance under Workmen's Compensation for work-connected injuries or illness, sick leave of up to one day a month, vacation after one year of employment and an annual physical examination, according to program administrator Kathi Otto.

Mrs. Otto, a music therapist who became administrator of the four-year-old program about five months ago, said she believes the main merit of the plan lies in its ability to bring otherwise lonely seniors in contact with children who desperately need individual attention.

"The children (who range in age from 1 to 21 years) get very good care here," she said, "but there's just no way, when you have 16 or 18 kids to a ward, that they can give a lot of individual attention."

But with the Foster Grandparent Program, the kids are taken on walks around the grounds, to the canteen for treats, to the farm to play with the animals or to the pool.

SHE SAID each grandparent is assigned to two children, working with one for two hours each morning and the other for two hours each afternoon.

Mrs. Otto added that the grandparents also provide the children, who otherwise wouldn't have the opportunity, a chance to go on field trips to Southland amusement parks, picnics and bowling alleys.

GRANDMOTHER TWYLA PRIESTER INTRODUCES RAMON, 7, TO A GOAT

At the hospital, the grandparents can easily be spotted by their distinctive blue smocks as they push their charges around in their wheelchairs, ride the facility's "Jolly Trolley" or sit in the shade enjoying an Indian Summer day.

Their status may be adoptive, but an eavesdropper would easily mistake them for natural grandparents.

"Look at this child. Just look at her," Rita Quick said to a passerby, tilting the face of 12-year-old Lisa upward. "Isn't she beautiful? She has personality plus!"

Mrs. Quick, a 72-year-old Newport Beach resident, later explained that she joined the Foster Grandparent Program soon after her husband died three years ago.

"I came out here, and it was real therapy for me," said the white-haired Mrs. Quick, who has four natural grandchildren.

She said one of her foster grandchildren, 11-year-old Tracy, came to Fairview after an accident. "She was doubled up in a prenatal position, and she wouldn't respond to anyone," Mrs. Quick said.

But now she's walking and attending a special school—she's blind—for two hours a day. "I'm so grateful. I really feel that I've made some progress with her."

As she spoke, another patient walked by, noticed her blue coat and said with a smile, "Hi, Grandma." The boy, who wasn't one of Mrs. Quick's charges, is one of several patients who benefit from the smiles and attention of the foster grandparents, according to Mrs. Otto.

"It's going to be three years pretty soon since I've been in the program," said Benny Fox, a former circus aerialist who now lives in Anaheim.

"This—working with these kids—is the happiest moment of my old age," added Fox. "It's wonderful, just wonderful."

Esther Dessardo, a 71-year-old Anaheim resident, agreed with Fox:

"I've been in the program about six months," she said. "I figured it was about time for me to give up my job as a nurse's aide—I was one for 17 years—and do something else. This is it, and I love it."

My two grandchildren are both in wheelchairs, so they don't run me ragged," she added. "I do get a great deal of enjoyment loving them and letting them know I'm around. They don't recognize me by sight, but they both know my voice. It's a very nice way of not staying at home being bored."

They want to keep 'schoolgirl figures'

Saidi Dancers gyrate for the fun of it

Story and Photos
By BOB GEIVET

"Saidi" means "Hello" in Arabic, and 18 lovely costumed dancers can welcome you to the "world" of the Seven Veils, and Ali's 1,000 Nights.

So reads the introduction to the Saidi Dancers, who, true to claim, are lovely.

They live in Orange County, Long Beach and environs, and they perform anywhere—for the love of it, because they're all volunteers and none is paid.

The young women of Saidi Dancers are so dedicated that they provide their own costumes. And for the variety of dances they do—Arabic and other ethnic interpretations along with Polynesian love routines and American jazz—that's considerable.

AS AN organization, however, there is a charge for performances, except for charity affairs. Usually, the charge is nominal, and all profits are used for material for costumes.

Then, as occasion demands, the women have sewing sessions to make their new outfits. And it seems to them that they're constantly replacing their costumes, because there's little strength in the sheer materials they use.

The young women started two years ago to exercise and dance "to keep our schoolgirl figures," and they found that the exercise and the dancing did the trick—to the delight of those who see them.

The idea of exercising for figure enhancement brought them together at a class started at Loara High School in Anaheim by Mary Berg of Cerritos, who works with the Anaheim, Garden Grove and Long Beach recreation departments.

Born in Beirut as Mary Hazaboun, she learned the typical Arabian dances as a child.

IN HER native Lebanon, and in all other Arab countries, the dance most favored is the Beledi. Mrs. Berg said it was developed first as a family affair, and women about to experience childbirth practiced it "to develop stomach contortions to aid them in delivery."

The Beledi dance next was used in tribute to pagan gods, and later became the dance of the harems, thus taking on sexual and sensuous overtones, she explained.

The American version is the "belly dance," with, of course, more skimpy costumes than were ever worn in Arabia, Mrs. Berg said.

The spangles became part of the dance costume when young women danced to earn coins for

Lakewood faces employe strike

By HAL LOWE
Staff Writer

The City of Lakewood will face its first strike by city employees in its 22-year history when 99 members of Service Employees International Union Local 680 start picketing city hall at 6:15 a.m. Tuesday.

The Lakewood bargaining unit of the union covers employees in parks and recreation, the water department, tree trimming and building inspection. They are seeking a flat $50-a-month salary increase.

John Adams, union regional manager, said last week that the object of the picketing was to get city officials to return to the bargaining table. "But," Adams said, "city officials tell us it's a closed matter."

Two executive sessions of the City Council were scheduled for last Thursday and Friday to seek a solution to the labor problems, but both were canceled when not enough council members could be contacted for a meeting. A city hall source said many of the council members were away for the long holiday weekend.

In a statement issued over the weekend, City Administrator Howard Chambers, who has been negotiating for the city, gave the city's position in the dispute.

"Over a period of approximately three months, city representatives have been meeting with the union. On Aug. 17, a failure to agree on employee salary increases resulted in an impasse being declared. The city's procedure for the resolution of impasse was then implemented," the statement said.

"The matter was heard by the City Council at its meeting on Aug. 21 and the council directed that a series of changes and additions be made in the city's compensation program. These included eight items agreed to by the union, plus salary increases ranging from a minimum of 3 per cent to 10.5 per cent for employees represented by the union."

Chambers said, "At this point, the union continues to demand that all employees receive a $60-a-month salary increase. The strike presumably is being called to bring attention to this item."

"The city considers the strike an illegal act and reserves the right to take appropriate action. However, if a strike does take place, arrangements have been made for a continuation of city services. All city offices will remain open," Chambers said.

In rejecting the union proposal at its Aug. 24 meeting, the City Council estimated that a $60 increase would mean a city property tax boost of 4 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Water agency may appeal land value

Directors of the Orange County Water District may appeal a Santa Ana Superior Court jury's finding that a 58-acre parcel of the old Burris Sand Pit at Anaheim is worth $818,715, an amount far larger than the district anticipated during condemnation actions.

Three parcels were involved in a court battle over the price of the land, which the water district took by eminent domain for use as a water-sinking pit and reservoir for surplus flow.

The 115-acre sand pit was shut down during the heavy storms of 1969, when the Santa Ana River threatened to overflow its banks at the Burris property, situated at a bend of the river between South Street and Ball Road.

Subsequently, negotiations began for acquisition of the long-closed sand pit. Various uses have been considered, including a recreational park, a lake and as a dump ground that could later be improved for public use.

Owners of the land are La Verne Bassie, Nanette Porter and Bessie Brooks, and they valued it at $12,500 to $15,000 per acre. The water district said it was worth $1,500 to $5,000 per acre.

The district had offered $225,000 for the land and the owners rejected the price. The district then condemned it, agreeing to let the court determine the price.

LETTER FROM MAC

MALCOLM EPLEY

FORT BIDWELL—Readers accustomed to the bustle down yonder sometimes ask me how I spend my time up here in the back country.

My answer is that it's very easy to spend a lot of time here. In fact, it's not hard to spend all the time.

This little incident may illustrate:

Harry Hollins, who ranched here until about six months ago and then left for the south, came back the other day to look after his interests. I was sitting on the front porch of the store on a simply magnificent afternoon, observing whatever was going on, which wasn't much. The rancher came up in a pickup.

"Mac," said Hollins, "you haven't gotten very far. I'm sure you were sitting right there the last time I saw you in the spring."

ON THE same day, Eugene Meyer, recently retired from the postal service at Long Beach, came by with a Lakeview friend. We sat down in the shady front yard.

Something came up about hobbies and retirement. I observed that one hobby is simply doing nothing. After 50 years of chasing news and meeting deadlines, I averred, I found that particular new hobby very rewarding.

If this sounds frightening or disgusting, let me say that the impression I've given may be a little exaggerated, just for fun.

I do feed our dogs, look after and sometimes ride our horses, switch irrigation water in the meadows, mow the lawn, putter a little around the place, go to town on various errands.

I'VE DONE enough civic things that I'm slated as upcoming president of the Surprise Valley Rotary Club, which is quite something for a fellow who has been president of two Kiwanis clubs (downtown Long Beach and Klamath Falls).

Also, on some evenings, I add to the onerous chores of the day by playing a little cards—a game in which deceit and stealing are moral but somewhat exhausting. It takes something out of one to abandon, for a few hours, the principles he has lived by.

To offset that, I meticulously handle the cash as treasurer of both the church and the volunteer fire department.

And of course, I knock out this column once a week. For the most part, that's pure enjoyment.

WHILE I was sitting in front of the store that day, a strange thing happened.

A van came up and out stepped a fellow named

Statham, who is the Republican nominee for state assemblyman in our district.

He's the only candidate for state office I've seen at Ft. Bidwell since coming up here five years ago. We have about 100 voters and only a mighty thorough campaigner would drive the long distance to our corner to dig for the few votes available.

Furthermore, the Assembly district is immense, covering most of Northern California above the Sacramento valley. Statham lives at Chico, as does his Democratic opponent, a woman.

Chico is a long way from here. In area, the Assembly district is larger than many states, with extreme variations in economic interests, geography, etc. Earl Warren's one-man-one-vote thing did that.

If Statham's visit here is an indication of the kind of vote drive he'll make, he's going to put a lot of mileage behind that van.

And I intend to vote for him.

Labor Day, 1976

In the nearly 100 years since the first Labor Day in 1882, the position of the working man and woman in American society has undergone almost unbelievable changes.

In the closing days of the 19th Century, about half of all U. S. workers still were on farms, although the movement to industry was increasing rapidly.

Over the following decades, labor organizations developed from loosely allied groups of craft workers to powerful, nationwide unions. In the early days, these changes were not without violence.

REFORM, not revolution, was the goal of organized labor, however. It won an end to the 12-hour day and six-day week. It helped get child-labor laws adopted, and it brought better wages and working conditions. Although more remains to be done, there have been great strides in eliminating discrimination in job opportunity on the basis of sex or race.

Today, the major labor unions are as powerful as industry. In some areas, unfortunately, Big Labor seems to have fallen back toward the excesses of Big Business in earlier days. It has organized government workers, called strikes which have crippled cities and, in the case of New York, must accept at least part of the blame for its financial woes.

By no means are all American workers members of labor unions, but all of them are taxpayers. If public employees' unions make unreasonable demands, and get them, the taxpayers must foot the bill.

ON THIS Labor Day, organized labor should be concerned that there seems to be a growing disenchantment with unions. Twenty states have now adopted so-called "right-to-work" laws, which prohibit the requirement of union membership to get or hold a job.

A recent national poll by Opinion Research Corp. — although, granted, it was commissioned by the National Right to Work Committee — said that 75 per cent of all Americans and 72 per cent of union families opposed the requirement of union membership as a condition of keeping a job. Even viewing the poll results with skepticism, they indicate a dissatisfaction with unions. There appears a growing attitude of, "unions were necessary at one time, but that time has passed."

So, on Labor Day, 1976, there is a challenge facing both labor and industry: to recognize the needs of society, as well as their own, and abandon any remnants of a "public be damned" policy.

Women's problems

Labor Day is a good time to think about women in the work force and their opportunities for employment. The opportunities are increasing, but there still are problems:

— Employers who will not accept the idea that a woman should get the same pay as a man for doing the same job.

— Prejudices against giving women executive positions, even when they obviously are qualified.

Women also have the employment problem of virtually being conditioned to enter only "traditional" female occupations, particularly the clerical field.

Henry Taboada, the city's affirmative action officer, points out that non-traditional jobs — such as painters, mechanics, or as a story in the Independent, Press-Telegram described last week, window washers — offer better opportunities economically.

Not only is the pay better, Taboada said, but women in such jobs would not have the added expense of buying and maintaining a suitable wardrobe such as usually is the case with clerical jobs. In many of the non-traditional jobs, uniforms are provided.

Despite this, less than 900 of the nearly 4,500 Long Beach city employees are women, and 85 per cent of them are in clerical fields.

One of the real problems facing woman seeking city employment is the veterans preference, which gives certain veterans a bonus of 10 points on the score of their civil service exam. Few women saw wartime duty in the armed forces, so do not qualify for the 10-point bonus.

As a result, if a man scores 80 on a civil service exam, a woman would have to score 91 to rank ahead of him on the eligibility list for that job.

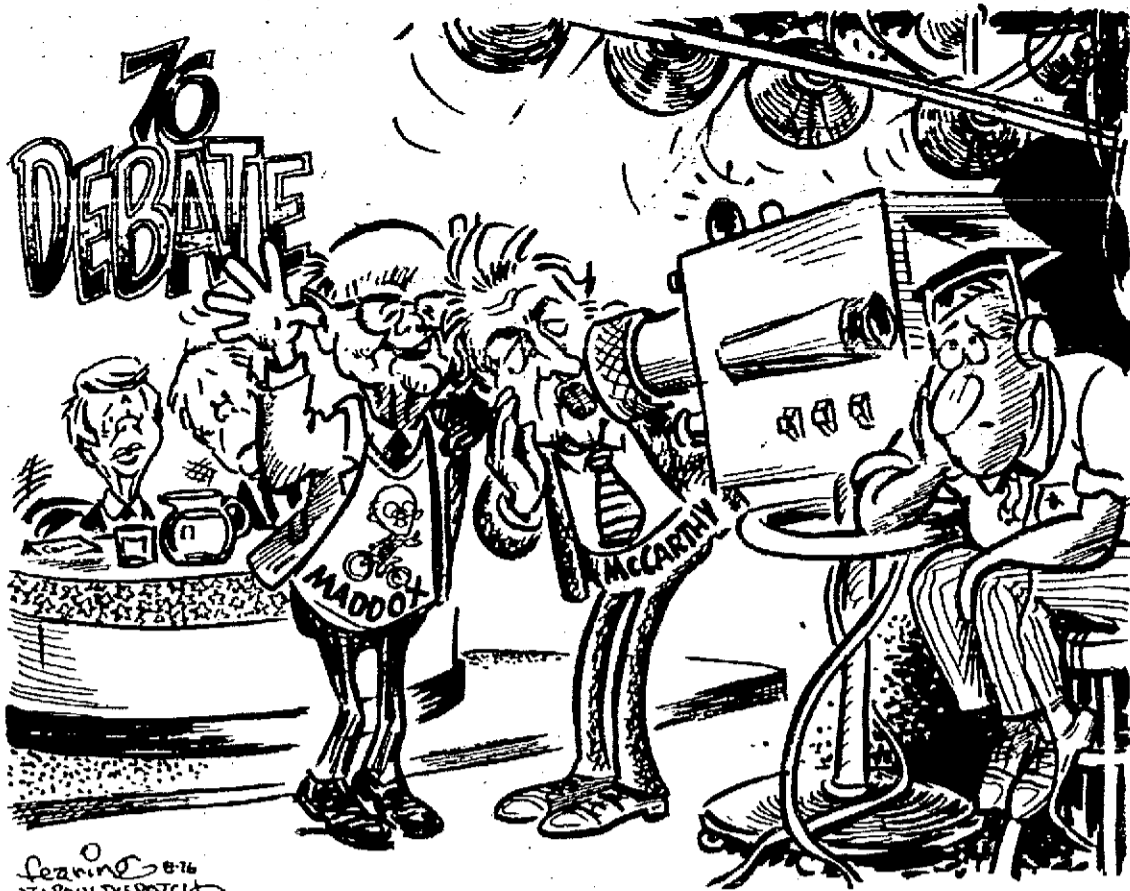

A few years ago, the regulations permitted a veteran to claim the 10-point bonus as long as he lived, but amendments have now limited the time for applying. Applications now must be made within 10 years of discharge after service during wartime. The rules spell out what periods are considered time of war, and the last eligible date is July 1, 1973, during the Vietnam conflict. This means that the 10-point bonus is available only to Vietnam veterans, and only until June 30, 1983.

EVEN WITH this limitation, it is obvious the veterans preference discriminates against women, few of whom served in the armed forces during the Vietnam war.

Any individual who gave up a year or more of his, or her, life to serve the nation is entitled to some help in getting back into civilian employment. Whether this takes 10 years, however, is questionable.

We recognize that veterans groups will defend the 10-point bonus vigorously and vociferously, but we think the City Council should review the provision and see if there is some way of aiding the veteran without discriminating against women in job opportunities.

Working woman today are, in many cases, the sole support of a family, but whether this is the case or not, they are entitled to equal opportunities in employment.

Letters to the editor

Courteous, efficient

This letter was inspired by George Robeson's recent column regarding Long Beach bus drivers.

I'm a fan of George's and enjoy his column greatly as a rule, but in this case I feel he should have given some credit where it was due, in addition to his criticism.

As a driver of my own car, I have sometimes felt that the Big Blue Buses took up more than their fair share of the street. However, I have for the past four years found it necessary to rely on these same buses for transportation on a daily basis, and I have had the opportunity to see the other side of the coin.

A high percentage of those who ride the buses are elderly. Many are handicapped to various degrees and some can barely navigate their way onto the bus, often causing delays while they slowly work their way up the steps and to a seat.

I have consistently been impressed by the patience and courtesy shown by the bus drivers. On only one occasion, in four years have I observed a driver to be impatient with one of these persons. I would say that is a darned good average.

At the age of 45, I am fortunate to have no disabling physical problems. But should the time come when such is the case, I hope I will have access to a system of transportation that is as satisfactory as the Long Beach bus system. Let's hear a round of applause for what is probably the most efficiently organized and courteously operated public transportation system in Southern California.

Help for boys

I certainly agree that years ago in our city it would have been a great help to hundreds of young folks if our police could have taken a few minutes to listen to a child. We realize and appreciate their busy routine consists of protecting the people from prospective law breakers.

Many young men would not have had to experience time in the county jail if there had been YMCA day camps partly sponsored by the police force.

The young people of today disrespect authority because they did not understand the club and have become hardened to survive in a harsh environment.

Juvenile halls are filled to the brim with boys who could become respectable citizens.

The boys in camps have been fortunate enough to learn to live with others and to cope with difficulties; also to talk a problem over in a congenial manner with their companion authorities.

I believe the Long Beach Police Department should be commended for donating time and finances as counselors at the Long Beach YMCA Camp Oaks.

It's not new

The "new culture" proposed by student John P. Roney in a recent letter to the I. P.T. is worthy of comment.

Shucks! The new body of thought of Technocracy, Inc., is a duplication of the same philosophy we've experienced over the past 40 years.

That was the beginning of an era where bureaucracy became king and democracy became a social outcast.

During these four decades our tangible national assets (one world) have become an endangered species. Mom and Pop, former co-chiefs of HEW have delegated their responsibilities to theirs. They have been replaced by a tidal wave of self-centered new national assets (two words?) in academia, business, church, government, home, labor, law, media and military.

An analysis of the "achievements" of our new society in contemporary America and where are we going from here reveals a simple historic solution: when government of the people, by the people becomes impossible, government of the people by the government becomes inevitable.

Marine Stadium noise

It is too bad that the very excellent Sea Festival has to be spoiled by the inclusion of those high-powered, extremely noisy power speedboats in the Marine Stadium. I am of the opinion that an environmental study should be conducted before this event is continued. The noise and fumes can be heard and smelled as far away as Pacific Coast Highway.

The noise plays havoc with the entire eastern area of Long Beach, where new residents are moving in daily. There is a definite situation of discrimination related to this activity. Why should thousands of people be subjected to this noise and fuel smell because of a minor few egotistical, speed-mad individuals who want to race their high-powered expensive boats?

There are many other sane activities that could be used to replace this activity in the Sea Festival that would be better drawing cards for the public. These high-powered boats should race in the Outer Harbor, or up at Lake Mead.

It might be a good idea to re-evaluate the entire use of Marine Stadium. The city needs money to help bail itself out of some of its stupid mistakes. Why not turn the stadium into a super small-boat marina and realize a nice profit for the city? There are thousands on the waiting list for boat slips. Question: Just how much actual revenue does the city realize from the way the stadium is being used now?

Let's face it, the stupid Grand Prix race is another discriminating activity that should be shelved at once. It's noisy. It's dangerous. It discriminates against taxpayers who want to use the streets and the area blocked by it. And above all, it is costing the taxpayers too much of their own money. Again, a study should be conducted on the overall benefit this activity has to the taxpayers of the city. I am sure we will find that the few who are in favor of this event will be in the minority.

The noise control commission is very definitely discriminating against the majority of taxpayers by exempting these two activities from their control suggestions. How about putting some of these problem items on the ballot and let the people decide for a change, instead of a few biased individuals?

W. T. KAY

No city noise commission exists at this time. The city planning staff is recommending a noise ordinance, but no action has yet been taken. The Editor

Keep the beach

Do our city fathers still intend to give our beach to the county of Los Angeles? After trying for many years to establish our own identity, this would seem a tragic mistake. The county, with its high overhead, cannot maintain our beach for less cost. And the funds will still come from the pockets of the taxpayers, be they routed through the county or city.

Maybe we should change our city's name to Long....

County services

The news story in the I. P.T. of Lakewood Councilman Plunket and Mayor Jo Bennett bearding the supervisors in their den would be newsworthy were it not so laughable.

It is a known fact that the contract cities are the greatest contributors to the high taxes that are plaguing the taxpayers of the cities that furnish their own services.

There are a few questions that should be answered by the contract cities. Everyone knows that they are paying about 60 per cent of what their own force would cost for police work, which leaves 40 per cent for the rest of the county taxpayers to pick up.

Now, the question is, what are they paying for fire protection, for the county parks they have within the cities, the county libraries built with county monies, and other county services they receive.

The Legislature should pass laws that any city that does not have a population of 100,000 should be annexed to the nearest large city that furnishes its own services. Otherwise they should be made to come up with the money to buy what the county owns in their city. These whistle-stop cities should be made to pay their own way.

On state, county and local level, the civil service system should be abolished completely. State, county and city employees, police, firemen, all belong to a union. Give them a choice, either civil service or their unions, but not both. They enjoy the protection of civil service while the union agitates slowdowns, speedups and plain loafing. Who gets stuck? The taxpayer.

There could be 100,000 employees cut from state, county and city work forces and still have the same amount of work done. To comprehend this, watch city employees trim trees or install sidewalks.

Not much help

I recently wrote to Senator Alan Cranston and Senator John V. Tunney for their aid in stopping the contemplated closing of the Navy Exchange and Commissary Store, a matter of great concern to thousands of active duty and retired personnel of all the services in California.

Senator Cranston did not have the courtesy to reply to my letter. All I received from Senator Tunney was a form letter which stated he was glad I was interested in the ecology.

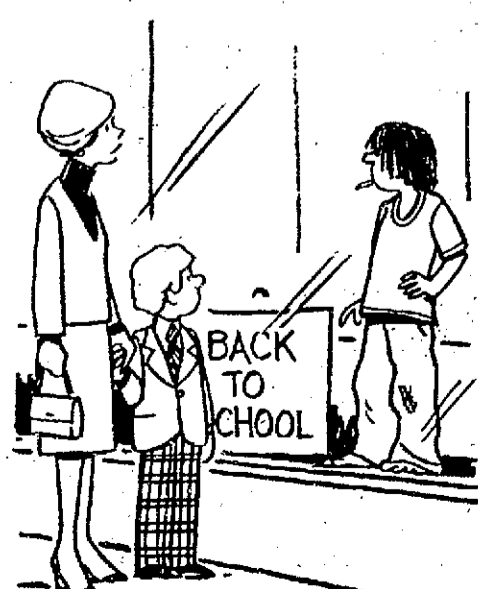

It appears that the only time the senators are interested in their constituents is at election time for their campaign contributions and for their votes.

Perhaps we should have two senators who are more interested in their constituents for reasons other than their money and their votes.

BY THE WAY, WHEN ARE FORD AND CARTER SUPPOSED TO HAVE THIS DEBATE?

No one can 'steal' the love of another

While Sydney Harris is vacationing, we are reprinting selected columns. — The Editor

A reader in Florida, apparently bruised by some personal experience, writes in to complain, "If I

steal a nickel's worth of merchandise, I am a thief and punished; but if I steal the love of another's wife, I am free."

This is a prevalent misconception in many people's minds that love, like merchandise, can be "stolen." Numerous states, in fact, have enacted laws allowing damages for "alienation of affections."

BUT LOVE is not a commodity; the real thing cannot be bought, sold, traded or stolen. It is an act of the will, a turning of the emotions, a change in the climate of the personality.

When a husband or wife is "stolen" by another person, that husband or wife was already ripe for the stealing, was already predisposed toward a new partner. The "love-bandit" was only taking what was waiting to be taken, what was to be taken.

We tend to treat persons like goods. We even speak of children "belonging" to their parents. But nobody "belongs" to anyone else. Each person belongs to himself, and if their parents do not treat them properly, the state has a right to remove them from their parents' trusteeship.

Most of us, when young, had the experience of a sweetheart being taken from us by somebody more attractive and more appealing. At the time, we may have resented this intruder — but as we grew older, we recognized that the sweetheart had never been ours to begin with. It was not the intruder that "caused" the break, but the lack of a real relationship.

On the surface, many marriages seem to break up because of a "third party." This is, however, a psychological illusion. The other woman or the other man merely serves as a pretext for dissolving a marriage that had already lost its essential integrity.

NOTHING IS MORE futile and more self-defeating than the bitterness of spurned love, the vengeful feeling that someone else has "come between" oneself and a beloved. This is always a distortion of reality, for people are not the captives or victims of others — they are free agents, working out their own destinies for good or for ill.

But the rejected lover or mate cannot afford to believe that his beloved has freely turned away from him — and so he ascribes sinister or magical properties to the interloper. He calls him a hypnotist or a thief or a home-breaker. In the vast majority of cases, however, when a home is broken, the breaking has begun long before any "third party" has appeared on the scene.

THE HARDEST thing in the world to keep in cold storage is a warm temper. — Herald, Miami.

George Robeson Can he plan a career of this?

THERE ARE BORN LOSERS, everybody knows that. Nearly everybody has met at least one in a lifetime. I had indirect contact with such a loser the other night.

I didn't meet him, but the evidence of his arrival and departure was clear when I visited my parked car. He had visited it, too, and a length of fine quality garden hose was drooping from the car's gas tank. The other end was in a trash can. A large green plastic bucket obviously borrowed from someplace down the street.

One end of the hose, the one inside the tank, smelled of gasoline. The end inside the bucket did not. Incidentally, the end inside the bucket (the sucking end) was fitted with a large brass attachment, which is unusually awkward for siphoning gas.

Several things went wrong with the rascal's plot:

IN THE FIRST PLACE, I had forgotten to get gasoline the day before, and there was enough in my tank to fill a large cigarette lighter and possibly get me to the station two blocks away.

In the second place, the thief either was scared away by an approaching car or pedestrian, or simply became discouraged after running more than four feet of hose into my tank and getting only a mouthful of brass instead of gas.

And so he lost his hose. So he couldn't go on to some other car that night.

And in the third place, had he gotten gas from my tank, it would have done him no good. The trash bucket he swiped for the job has a hole in the bottom, about four inches in diameter. All he would have gotten would be a pair of flammable shoes, if he wore shoes. If not, he could have contracted the dread disease, flaming feet.

Some guys just aren't cut out for a life of crime. I predict that, one day, this guy will be caught stealing a TV set from his own house. Hauled off to the cop-shop, he will attempt to escape by breaking away from his captors and rushing into the nearest jail cell, slamming the door behind him.

Then all night, he'll sit on the iron and wonder why things go so poorly for him. If I'm ever a stick-up victim, I hope he's the heister. I'll say, "Hey, I've never seen a pistol like that before," and he'll hand it to me.

ON BROADWAY, snuggled surprisingly between the Bixby Park Cleaners and an apartment house, is a sort of Mexican jungle. People pass it every day and don't notice it, because it's out of context in a primarily business district in the 1800 block.

It is a garden plot of cactus, tall, slim desert-born trees and other flora common to Mexico and parts of the Southwest United States. One type of huge-leaved desert plant is called Agavi, from which tequila is made.

Now don't go running down there with the idea of making some home-brewed cactus juice. The big garden (about 50 feet by 60 feet) is watched over off and on by residents of the apartment house next door.

This strange "other world" on a street of businesses and bars is laced with little paths that allow the passerby to cruise on foot for a few moments and pretend he's someplace else. I've done it several times.

And with the help of Edith Means of the cleaning shop next door and Jim Petrosky of the antique shop east of Edith, I tracked down the owner of the property. He's Art Haggis of 1012 Emerald Bay, Laguna Beach. He owns much of the property on that street, and the garden is the only plot that doesn't bring in an income. But he's sentimental about it. He likes growing things.

It was planted some 20 years ago, or perhaps a bit more recently, nobody recalls for sure, by one of the tenants in the apartment building. The planter is dead now. A few other tenants added to the project through the years. Many of those people have moved away, others are too old to put much work into the project.

BUT THE DESERT takes care of its own life, and so there is a place on a busy business street that is, fortunately for passers-by, out of place. I'd like to see some more out-of-place places like that one.

A lesson from the DMZ

The author is a South Korean who is studying at Long Beach State University for a master's degree in criminal justice. He previously obtained a law degree in Seoul. — The Editor

By SUNG-HWAN OH

First of all, I and all South Koreans really regret the recent loss of the two U.S. military officers in the DMZ. At the same time, I am sorry for the families of the two officers killed and for the Americans and American government. I would like to mention the real implications of the incident.

There are several conclusions to be drawn from the incident and about the situation in South Korea and North Korea today. They include: (1) to recognize once more the belligerent and brute character of Communist North Korea in the process of achieving their Communist goals, such as in Cambodia and Vietnam; (2) to consider once more not losing the support of the United States to her allies; and (3) to abstain from unrealistic prejudice toward South Korea, which produces the so-called "gradual withdrawal of American military forces from South Korea."

FOR COMMUNISTS everywhere, including not only North Korea, "ends justify means." I and all South Koreans already have many proofs of their inhumane means for achieving their Communist ends; for example, committing a large-scale massacre of many innocent South Koreans during the Korean War (1950-1953). With the intent of infiltrating South Korea, they also killed people by wielding any kind of deadly weapon such as hoes, scythes, stones, iron hammers, bamboo or metal pikes, and axes, and killed even by tearing a person's body to pieces. Such unforgettable and horrible incidents by the North Korean Communists during the Korean War, beyond the human imagination or understanding, still clearly exist in the minds of all South Koreans and the American people who served their military duty during the war.

In order to keep allied countries' trust in America's strong authority, which is gradually declining, there should be no more mistakes of America's foreign policies (e.g., in such countries as Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos), formed by some American politicians who are self-styled as progressive and liberal, aiming at a certain political issue for only their own group or political party rather than for the entire visible and invisible long-term interests of the United States of America.

JUDGING FROM the other recent incidents of willful murders or disturbances committed by the North Korea Communists in the DMZ of Korea, there is North Korea's willful attempt to test "how the United States of America reacts" or "how strong the United States of America keeps commitments to allies (especially South Korea)." In addition to the above facts to be tested, the North Korean Communists' true intentions might be strongly related to their attempt to cover up their serious domestic financial panic and power-struggle for nomination of a successor to Il-Sung Kim (the Prime Minister of North Korea), and to gain some support from this year's General Assembly of the United Nations by using their normal strategic method of blaming their troubles on South Korea. Under these artificial circumstances, the United States of America should not be misled or bewildered, but should continue to support all allied countries in the world, particularly for South Korea, which has already become one of the world's most tense places.

Finally, I and all South Koreans really wish some Americans would abstain from the unrealistic attitude toward South Korea. Those who do not know well the real situations between South and North Korea may insist on gradual withdrawal of American military forces from the so-called authoritarian country of South Korea, but this would most likely produce another invasion by the North Koreans. North Korea has been concentrating only on preparation of war while South Korea's concentration has been on national economic development through the revolutionary new community movement (Sae-Ma-Eul Movement).

THE CHANGES in South Korea in the past ten years have been dramatic. "When I came here seven years ago," a Western businessman in Seoul said, "there were very few big modern buildings and virtually no decent roads into the countryside. . . . Today, the center of Seoul doesn't look so very different from Tokyo in Japan" (quoted from the Sunday Mail, Singapore, February 17, 1974).

All South Koreans want only to coexist with the North Koreans until the peaceful reunification of South and North Korea will be realized. Thus, the South Koreans will continue to make efforts with sincerity and patience to secure concrete results from the South-North dialogue based on the spirit of the South-North Joint Communiqué on July 4, 1972, which was initiated by South Korea's Red Cross Talks with North Korea.

IN ADDITION to the above mentioned implications of the recent DMZ killings, it is necessary for people who are under the constitutional democratic governments of the world to understand that: (1) the North Korean Communists' normal means for certain ends are usually based on belligerence and brutality; (2) some American politicians who tend to associate the South Korean situation with the Vietnam experience should be misled by propaganda, but must strongly and continually uphold the allied countries' trust in the United States of America, and (3) the premature judgment in formulation of America's foreign policy (the so-called gradual withdrawal of American military forces from South Korea) should be withheld until such a time when more satisfactory circumstances between South and North Korea will emerge because this kind of judgment would weaken the United States' position in the Far East, especially in the Korean Peninsula.

Unfortunately, the commitment and moral responsibility toward the struggling people of South Korea have not been shared by some leaders in the U.S. South Korea's successful resistance to North Korea requires more accurate understanding of the South Korean situation by Americans and responsible policy by their leaders.

Inoculation problems

That proposal to inoculate the entire U.S. population against the swine influenza is a "bold undertaking," comments an editorial in the British Medical Journal.

A lot could go wrong. For one thing, there could be a measurable number of severe allergic side effects "which would not be balanced by tangible benefit."

And a swine flu pandemic, if it does come, may not do so this year. A population given a single dose of vaccine in the autumn of 1976 could lose much of its protection by the winter of 1977-78, and it might then be hard to persuade people to accept another injection when the first turned out not to have been necessary.

Also, there could be public loss of faith in influenza vaccine, which might extend to other vaccines.

The editorial points out that previous pandemics have erupted in countries in the Southern Hemisphere and the Far East before Europe and North America.

In addition, studies to date show that the swine flu virus is less virulent than most Type A influenza viruses. The editorial puts it this way: "It has not so far shown unusual virulence for man."

Although conditions in recruit camps favor epidemic spread, the swine flu outbreak in the United States (at a camp) lasted only about five weeks. Since then it has disappeared.

Drug for endometriosis

A new drug for the treatment of endometriosis, a gynecological disorder, has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

The compound is danazol, trademarked Danocrine. Endometriosis affects mainly the pelvic region. It may be characterized by pelvic pain, abnormal uterine bleeding, painful menstruation and a feeling of pressure within the pelvic cavity. Sterility may also be present.

Danazol is at present indicated only for patients who cannot tolerate other drug therapy or in whom other drugs are not indicated. It is not for use when surgery alone is considered the treatment of choice.

Details appear in Current Prescribing, a periodical for physicians.

For ingrown toenails

A way to prevent ingrown toenails is described by a Texas doctor.

The method: Insert a thin roll of cotton under the ingrowing area of the nail.

The difficult part is getting the cotton in place.

Dr. Peter S. Herman of El Paso suggests the following procedure: Slide a short length of dental floss under the corner of the nail. Elevate the nail edge by gentle traction with the floss. Then slip in the cotton pledget.

The report appears in Consultant, a periodical for doctors.

Bunk beds hazardous

Products often regarded as harmless may sometimes be hazardous, notes the U. S. Consumer Products Safety Commission.

Example: the bunk bed.

Last year, according to a new report, an estimated 13,500 bunk bed-related injuries were treated in hospital emergency rooms. Children under 15 sustained nearly 87 per cent of these injuries.

B. Unser 'survives' slow Cal 500

By ALLEN WOLFE
Staff Writer

When he left the All-American Racers team last year in what was termed a "conflict of interest" with car owner Dan Gurney, many believed it meant the end of Bobby Unser as a competitive factor in United States Auto Club championship racing.

But the 42-year-old Albuquerque charger silenced the detractors Sunday in the only way he could, winning the California 500 for the second time in three years by a 2.6-second margin over defending Indianapolis 500 champion Johnny Rutherford.

But Bobby U. not so much won the race as he survived it.

Ever since it was built in 1970, the Ontario Motor Speedway had been lionized as one of the safest on the circuit for its wide pit entrance, sweeping aprons in the turns and the fact that it was a "three groove" track. It has not lived up to the image.

Three separate accidents—one a spectacular 150 mph end-over-end flip involving rookie Danny Ongais—plus numerous incidents of oil spillage and stalled vehicles forced starter Shim Malone to display the yellow caution flag for 49 laps, or one lap short of one-fourth the race.

Thirty-seven of the first 90 laps were run under the caution flag, reducing the race average at that juncture to a paltry 124.533 mph. It was then that the somewhat disappointing crowd of 52,466 began to wonder if they had paid to see a destruction derby or the 10th stop on this year's USAC championship trail.

Then, just as dramatically, the race turned into a RACE and ultimately emerged as one of the most competitive in the event's history, as evidenced by 19 lead changes among seven drivers. Although front-row starters A.J. Foyt and Tom Sneva led briefly early in the going, both were sidelined before the midway point in the race.

Racer driven by Danny Ongais slides upside down after flipping during Sunday's California 500.

—AP Wirephotos

Foyt, who captured the pole at 190.416 mph, led the first 13 laps but then dropped off the pace and was sidelined with no oil pressure in his Coyote after 77 laps. Sneva was never really a factor. He led laps 14 and 15 and was the eighth man to leave the race, succumbing to ignition failure after only 60 laps.

With the two "rabbits" out of the running, that left it to a quartet of veterans to fight it out—the Simast Wildcat twosome of Wally Dallenbach and Gordon Johncock plus Rutherford and Bobby U.

From lap 58 on, the foursome was never separated by more than half a lap and they exchanged the lead between them 13 times.

Bobby U., who admitted after the race that "I didn't think the engine could last 500 miles," appeared to run stronger in his Bob Fletcher-sponsored Eagle-Offenhauser as the race progressed, out-running both Johncock and Rutherford.

The two-time Indy 500 winner took the lead for good on lap 178

when both Rutherford and Johncock pitted for fuel and tires. Three laps later, Unser pitted for 13.8 seconds and was able to maintain a lead of 10 car lengths over Rutherford exiting the pits.

Bobby then drew out to a 3-second lead and appeared to have the victory sewn up when an unthinking fan in the grandstands threw a beer can onto the racing surface near turn 4, bringing out the ninth and final yellow caution flag on the 194th lap, six shy of the checked flag.

According to USAC rules, cars are allowed to "bunch up" and Rutherford tucked his orange Hy-Gain McLaren right up to the tail of Unser's Eagle, awaiting a sprint to the finish. It never really transpired. The green was unfurled three laps from the end and Bobby simply left Johnny in his wake, winning by the final margin of 2.6 seconds or approximately 15 car lengths.

Best car at finish won race

Unser 'Crowes' over victory

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

Bobby Unser had a right to Crowe.

"Most people had forsaken us and figured we weren't competitive anymore," said the first two-time winner of the California 500.

Furthermore, Unser added, he didn't think so, either.

"I didn't think the engine would last all day," he said.

Unser gave credit to the Cobra team's engine specialist, Barry Crowe, who migrated from England in 1969 and was picked up last spring in Phoenix, where Unser posted his only other win of the USAC season.

"This is the first 500-mile Offy he's built," Unser said after Sunday's surprising victory, earned his $82,986, "so the guy has done more than a fantastic job. By the time he has more time to work with it he'll get us some horsepower."

Unser, who won the Cal 500 in '74 and finished second in '75, couldn't keep up with the hot cars early in the race "because they pull more horsepower than we do."

But he had one advantage — an old Eagle chassis set up by crew chief Wayne Leary.

"We weren't up front all day because we were concerned about our mileage," said the elder of the racing Unser brothers, "but after that it seemed I couldn't drive the thing hard enough to hurt the mileage too bad."

"But the real thing that helped me out, as the track got slipperier — worse for most of the cars — it got better for me. I had the best handling car. I could run laps as fast today as I did in practice. I was running 183 right there at the last."

In the five years Unser drove for Dan Gurney he had more success qualifying than finishing. For this race, he was only the 10th fastest qualifier at 185.376 mph.

But when he needed a couple of hot laps at the end, he was able to turn 'em on. "I tried something a little different," he said of his finishing dash when the green flag fell following the umpteenth caution period.

Rau blanks Astros

Cy Young duel: Sutton vs. Jones

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

HOUSTON — If Doug Rau had had a little better luck this season — and a few more runs — the Dodgers might have two candidates for the Cy Young Award instead of only one, Don Sutton.

Rau hurled a splendid three-hit, 4-0 shutout over the Houston Astros Sunday in the Astrodome for his 14th victory and he could easily have five more.

"I'm pitching the best I've ever pitched," Rau said following his fourth successive victory, a string which followed four losses in which the Dodgers scored just one run behind him.

Reggie Smith, with a bases-empty homer and a run-scoring triple, provided all the offense Rau needed for his third shutout of the year as well as the Dodgers' 10th win in their last 12 games to stay eight games back of Cincinnati.

Afterward Smith proclaimed:

"This two-game series in San Diego (tonight and Tuesday night) is very, very crucial. I know every game is important but it's more important that we do well against San Diego because the Padres have done the job on us this year."

Dodgers of day

DOUG RAU hurled three-hit shutout and REGGIE SMITH homered and tripled in 4-0 victory over Astros.

The Dodgers, 27-35 against the National League West, have won only four of 13 games against the Padres.

Tonight, though, it's obvious the Padres are placing a good deal more importance on the Cy Young Award than they are the Dodgers.

They're starting Randy Jones, their candidate for the Cy Young, and they're starting him with only two days rest for one reason — national television (Channel 7, 5:40 p.m.), which means exposure.

Jones won 16 of his first 20 decisions — three of them against the Dodgers — but since the All-Star break has won but four of 11 and now stands at 20-11. The last time he worked with only two days rest he failed to last four innings.

The whole thing could backfire for the Pads.

Nicklaus' 'bad year': $261,769

World Series victory credited to hot putter

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, who says it hasn't been a very good season, salvaged some satisfaction with a two-under-par 68 and a convincing, four-stroke victory Sunday in the new, enlarged, enriched World Series of Golf.

"I never count it a good year if I don't win one of the majors (the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and PGA)," Nicklaus said, then smiled.

"I didn't win one of those so it's not a good season from that standpoint. But if you can't win a major, it'd be nice to be the leading money-winner."

The $100,000 he collected — matching the largest prize the game has ever offered — from the total purse of $300,000 put Nicklaus in his customary position atop the season's money-standings with $261,769.

He won his second tournament of the year, and the 60th of his unmatched career, with some brilliant putting that produced a 275 total for the expanded 72 holes of this event over Jack's favorite hunting grounds, the 7,180 yards of the South course at the Firestone Country Club.

It was his seventh triumph on this course, including four previous

CAMPREGHER, BELLMAR TIED

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Finesse is essential to playing quality golf, but there is something special about two heavyweights slugging it out for the championship.

That should happen today at Skylinks in the final round of the Long Beach Medal Play Championship when Tony Campregher, known as "The Bull," and Mike Bellmar, called "The Bear," tangle.

Campregher is a 6-foot, 210-pounder, Bellmar a 6-1½, 215-pounder. Both are power players who hit the ball so long that the par-5s play like par-4s.

Bellmar, 25, caught Campregher, 20, with a sparkling 4-under-par 68 at Recreation Park Sunday which included a 5-under 31 on the back side, highlighted by a 25-foot eagle putt on the par-5 14th. Bellmar had birdies on the other two par-5s.

Campregher birdied the three par-5s but had to settle for a 70. That left him deadlocked with Bellmar at 6-under 138, three strokes ahead of Ben Serrus of Skylinks and southpaw Larry Watts (68) of Green River.

Serns, from El Camino JC, and Greg Hetzer of Skylinks tied for low-round honors with 67s on the 6,553-yard course. Hetzer is four off the pace at 142 along with Mike Blum (69) of Old Ranch and former UC Irvine all-America Jerry Wisz (68) of Willowick.

"My putter is working," said Bellmar, who was 2-over at one juncture before shaving six strokes over the final 10 holes. He took a double bogey on the sixth when his approach bounced over the trap and into the ice plant. He had to take an unplayable.

"Acts of God are getting me," moaned the former Long Beach Masters champion who had similar misfortune Saturday.

The Trojans and their new coach

Five USC players — quarterback Vince Evans and Rob Hertel, offensive tackle Marvin Powell, fullback Dave Farmer and defensive tackle Gary Jeter — were discussing the coaching change at the school for the benefit of touring Pacific-8 football writers.

Powell didn't think the switch from John McKay to John Robinson would affect the program.

"I don't give a damn who the head coach is," said Powell. "You give me a job and I'll give you eight good hours. If you open the door for me, I'm going to walk in."

"What you want done, I'll do. I didn't come here to make the rules, I came here to graduate and I'm going to."

Bell has maintained a sense of humor despite the pressures of being an all-America and a Heisman Trophy candidate.

"I really dug coach McKay's practices," he said with a grin. "Sometimes they would be only an hour or an hour and a half."

"But basically, the change hasn't affected us. The tradition we have at USC is the respect we all have for each other. The coaches respect us. That's why the program has been so successful."

HERTEL CAME on stronger.

"Paul Hackett (new assistant) has taught me a lot," he said. "I've learned more about what to do in certain situations in two weeks than I had the previous three years."

Ouch. That one was felt as far away as Tampa.

Jeter said he had been remotivated.

"I'm a little more excited," he said. "I was falling into a pattern the last couple of years — a pattern in which I could slide. Coach Robinson is putting me in a position of team leadership."

Farmer finessed the question. "I've been here five years," he said. "Things are pretty much the same. We have a lot of talented players who have gone through four years together — 23 of us, in fact."

Evans said "Hackett has helped me a lot. He's given me a perspective on the game, a greater understanding of football. That's the key as far as a quarterback goes."

Powell broke everyone up when he said "the coaches have an obligation toward me, too."

Ram offense, or lack of it, causes alarm

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

The San Francisco 49ers used to be a team the Rams could beat in their sleep, and it looked as if they were trying to.

Everyone has a theory why the offense couldn't score any touchdowns in Saturday night's 10-3 victory that closed their exhibition season on a clean 6-0.

"I'm a little disappointed in some of the plays that were called," says Ron Jaworski, the quarterback.

"We could have used some of the deeper stuff. We were conservative. But, then, we killed ourselves with mistakes and penalties."

The plays are called by a network of Ram brains emanating from Leeman Bennett in the press box to offensive coordinator Ken Meyer on the sideline, with approval of Chuck Knox.

THEY WERE NOT pleased with how Jaworski and the rest of the offense executed their suggestions, but most coaches believe that the QB usually receives too much credit for a win and too much blame for a loss.

There are other theories. Tom Mack, the Rams' all-pro left guard: "I can tell you we're not as bad as you might want to believe. When you play a pre-season game you work on individual techniques. When the league starts you're more concerned about all working together."

Dennis Harrah, the young right guard: "San Francisco was the best team we've faced so far. They came after you, and they worked their stunts up front like it was the 10th game of the season. We didn't do a good job, but they were more intense than any club we've played."

Monte Clark, the 49ers' rookie coach: "I thought our defense played well enough to win three games. It was truly a championship effort by them."

JAWORSKI AGAIN: "I couldn't get a 'feel' for the guys. Maybe it's because our first (league) game is coming up, or that we just broke training camp, moved out of Fullerton and the guys are busy moving into their homes and apartments and weren't thinking enough about football. I don't know."

Jaworski seemed none the worse for wear after being sacked seven times. Counterpart Jim Plunkett was chased out of bounds or dumped five times but threw four interceptions. Jaworski was picked off once.

"I don't want to hurt us by throwing the ball up for grabs," Ron says, "so I'll take the loss if I can't find anybody open."

There is no concern with the Rams' defense, although the 49ers' much-improved running game netted 171 yards, topped by Wilbur Jackson's 97 on only 15 carries.

The Rams ran for 166, led by Lawrence McCutcheon's 65 for 16. Knox is still undecided about a running back combination.

"We played (John) Cappelletti and McCutcheon in the same backfield quite a bit in the second half, but I haven't decided yet whether we'll use that backfield," he said.

Cappelletti finished pre-season with 237 yards and a 4.8 average. McCutcheon was 276 and 4.3, Bertelsen 108 and 2.8.

The old problem is that Bertelsen plays tailback and Cappelletti fullback, McCutcheon shifting to the opposite position. Bertelsen's rushing has been hampered by a surgical knee, but he is still valued as a blocker for McCutcheon.

Knox's problem is to find a workable solution in all of that but, what the heck, he still has six days until the season opens.

Patriots, 20-7 Defense lifts Denver, 30-17

Associated Press

Rookie Lonnie Perrin and veteran Randy Gradishar turned defensive plays into touchdowns Sunday to lead the Denver Broncos to a come-from-behind 30-17 victory over the Minnesota Vikings in their final National Football League preseason game.

In Sunday's other contest, second-period scoring runs by Don Calhoun and Ike Forte lifted New England over Philadelphia, 20-7.

Perrin's touchdown came early in the fourth quarter when he blocked a

Minnesota punt, then caught the ball on the 29-yard line and raced in for the touchdown.

In the final minute of play a Vikings' threat ended when tackle John Grant deflected a Fran Tarkenton pass, and Gradishar intercepted and raced down the sidelines 87 yards for the touchdown.

Tarkenton passed for more than 300 yards and had 27 completions out of 40 attempts.

CALHOUN ran 10 yards and Forte five, as the Patriots capitalized on the Eagles' turnovers. Calhoun's run followed a fumble by Philadelphia quarterback Mike Boryla. Forte's burst with a minute remaining in the second quarter capped a drive that started when a Boryla pass was intercepted in the Philadelphia end zone by Patriots cornerback Bob Howard.

He on his best behavior it look easy

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP)—It was a breeze for Wimbledon titleholders Chris Evert and Bjorn Borg and one could almost detect invisible halos dancing around the head of devilish Ilie Nastase Sunday in the third round of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

The fifth-seeded Nastase, whose maniacal outbursts almost triggered a riot on the center court 48 hours before, wasn't perfect—but he wasn't obnoxious either as he harnessed his skilled game for a 6-2, 7-5 victory over mustachioed Marty Riessen, the former U.S. Davis Cupper.

Nastase said he was "very nervous before the match. It was like going into the Colosseum. I was never feeling so bad before a match."

The madcap Romanian received a mixture of boos and cheers when he was escorted into the stadium and, although provoked by two foot-fault calls and distracting yells from the gallery, his only offenses were a stony stare at a linesman and a mild protest to the umpire. Another time, he petulantly served a double-fault to accent confusion in the umpire's chair.

The top-seeded Miss Evert, playing every shot as if the title hung in the balance, crushed Glynnis Coles, a big hard-hitting Britisher, 6-0, 6-0.

It was Chris' 97th consecutive victory on clay covering 21 tournaments since she last was beaten on the surface by Evonne Googlagong in the Western Open in 1973.

Borg, seeded No. 2 behind Jimmy Connors, gave an almost errorless performance in whipping John Lloyd, a 22-year-old classical shotmaker out of Britain, 6-3, 6-3.

Wins U.S. Amateur, 8 and 6

Sander makes

Bill Sander, the 20-year-old Pacific Northwest titlist from Kenmore, Wash., captured the 76th United States Amateur Golf Championship Sunday, overwhelming southerner Parker Moore, 8 and 6, in their scheduled 36-hole final.

Sander took the lead on the first hole and was never headed in the final battle at the Bel Air Country Club course. The victory was the most decisive in match play for the event since Jack Nicklaus whipped Duddly Wysong by the same count in 1961.

Sander closed out the match with a 12-foot putt on the 30th hole for a birdie, which left him just one over par for the full distance.

Sander had dropped out of Brigham Young University 18 months ago and said, "The last year and one half of my life has been playing golf."

He started the final match with a birdie on the 487-yard first hole and built a five-hole margin at the end of the first nine.

Moore, 22 and a summer graduate of Clemson University, rallied to cut the margin to one hole at the end of the 15th but then lost the final three holes.

Sander shot a two-under-par 31 for that first nine, five better than his foe from Laurens, S.C.

Moore battled a balky putter on the afternoon round with three-putt greens at the third, sixth and seventh holes as Sander shoved his margin to seven holes and put the match out of reach.

Sander, sometimes talking to the ball ala baseball pitcher Mark (The Bird) Fidrych, built a five-hole lead after nine holes, saw it cut to a single hole after 13 to Moore's rally and then gained again.

A cosy gallery of about 300 watched the final match between the two virtual unknowns. Moore had won six matches after drawing an opening bye while the 6-foot-2, 170-pound Sander had captured seven.

The new champion, who has enrolled at the University of Houston and will leave for there immediately, said he started golf as a 12-year-old when his father gave him a five iron.

"In high school, I played golf everyday," he said.

"I enrolled in Brigham Young in the fall of 1974, but went there only one semester."

Team Canada edges USA Russians upset with officiating

MONTREAL (AP)—The team representing the Soviet Union at the Canada Cup international ice hockey tournament threatened to pull out of the event Sunday, and tournament director Alan Eagleson said, "If they want to go, I'll help them pack."

Officials of the Soviet squad were incensed over the performance of Canadian referee Andre Lagasse, who handled Sunday's 3-3 Russian tie against the team from Sweden.

Soviet assistant coach Robert Cherenkov said after the game that, "I blame the officials for the Soviet not winning the game. We had to play the Swedes and the referees."

"We were shorthanded too much," Cherenkov claimed after the game. "It is a great tribute to our players that we overcame such a difficult situation."

Eagleson was having none of that. "I don't think it's serious," he said at a news conference preceding the Team USA-Team Canada game Sunday night. "It's a tempest in a teapot. Any time Russia loses or lies, they blame the referees and threaten to pull out of the tournament."

In Sunday's other games, first-period goals by Phil Esposito, Pete Mahovich and Bobby Hull carried Team Canada to a 4-2 victory over Team USA and Czechoslovakia logged the first shutout of the tournament by beating Finland, 8-0.

A new game starts each Thursday
All correct entries qualify for the Grand Prize Drawing

★ HOW TO PLAY ★
CASH-O is a weekly game played with numbers. Games begin on Thursday and end on Tuesday. A CASH-O chart will be published each of these days in the Independent Press-Telegram. A CASH-O chart contains 74 number boxes and a CASH-O box in the center. Three or four new numbers will be published each day Thursday through Tuesday. A total of 72 numbers will be published by Tuesday.
Copy the published numbers on your CASH-O entry form (or draw your own entry form) as they appear in the Independent Press-Telegram each day, Thursday through Tuesday. By Tuesday you will find that there are only two numbers missing. When you fill in the two correct numbers you have solved CASH-O.
How you arrive at the correct solution to CASH-O and what the two missing numbers are, is what makes CASH-O a real challenge. Look out! CASH-O may fool you. To solve CASH-O you may have to add, subtract, multiply, divide or you may have to do a combination of those things. You may even have to find another way to solve CASH-O, such as by inverting numbers or by seeing a pattern develop which could lead you to a solution. CASH-O is tricky. It's not only a new game with a new solution each week, but the method of solution may also change each week. Watch it!

★ RULES ★
1. It is not necessary to buy or subscribe to the Independent Press-Telegram or to use a CASH-O entry form. Copies of these newspapers can be checked at public libraries. You may submit an entry by copying on a plain sheet of paper the entry form and the published numbers as they appear in the Independent Press-Telegram together with your solution of the two unpublished numbers. Photo or mechanically reproduced entries will not be accepted.
2. After you have completed your CASH-O entry, mail it to:
CASH-O
Independent Press-Telegram
P.O. Box 420
Long Beach, CA 90801
or bring your entry in the Independent Press-Telegram building at 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach.
3. There is no limit on the number of entries you may submit, but each entry must be in a separate envelope and each must be received no later than 5 p.m. of the Monday following the end of each weekly contest. Prize winners will be determined by random drawings among the correct solutions received on time. If no correct solutions are received or fewer correct solutions are submitted than the number of prizes offered, the prizes, or the remaining prizes, will be awarded by means of random drawings from all entries received by the closing time. The decisions of the Independent Press-Telegram judges are final in all cases.
4. PRIZES: Each week one first prize of $300, one second prize of $200 and five third prizes of $100 each will be awarded. BONUS: A 10% cash bonus will be awarded to regular CASH-O weekly winners who are verified daily home delivery subscribers to the Independent or Press-Telegram as of the date of the drawing.
GRAND PRIZE: After the last CASH-O game, the Grand Prize 1977 Ford Thunderbird winner will be selected at random from all correct entries received, including past winners.
Winners' names and the answers to the weekly puzzles will be published in the Independent Press-Telegram on the Wednesday following each game's deadline. Cash prizes will be mailed.
5. The contest is open to anyone 18 years of age or older, except employees, circulation representatives and their immediate families of the Independent Press-Telegram, Knight-Ridder Newspapers, Inc., its affiliated companies, and Morden-Kune, Inc.
6. The winners grant the Independent Press-Telegram the right to publish their names and photographs without additional compensation. Local, state and federal taxes, if any, must be borne by the winners.
7. NO TELEPHONE INFORMATION REGARDING DAILY NUMBERS WILL BE GIVEN.

Improvement seen with president-elect

U.S.-Mexico ties at low point

By ALAN RIDING
New York Times Service

MEXICO CITY — The militant efforts of President Luis Echeverria Alvarez to reduce Mexico's identity with the United States and to align it with the third world have driven relations between Washington and Mexico City to their lowest ebb in recent memory.

Although there is no single point of conflict between the two governments, a growing mood of mutual irritation has led to sharp exchanges on several long-standing bilateral issues, such as the alleged ill-treatment of illegal Mexican migrants to the United States and of Americans serving prison terms in Mexico.

YET, diplomats from both countries, who have watched helplessly as political tensions have grown, are also confident that Mexico's president-elect, Jose Lopez Portillo, who takes office Dec. 1, will seek a normalization of ties with Washington.

Both the outgoing and incoming Mexican presidents will be visiting the United States this month. Echeverria will go to San Antonio, Tex., Tuesday to open a Mexican trade fair, although a planned meeting there with President Ford has fallen through.

Two weeks later, Lopez Portillo will visit Washington, where he will lunch with Ford and meet other U.S. officials.

In their different ways, though, both trips — Echeverria promoting Mexican exports to the United States and Lopez Portillo initiating his own political dialogue with Washington — reflect the complexity of Mexico's relationship with the United States.

As a nation of mixed Indian and Spanish heritage, Mexico is proudly nationalistic and always anxious to assert its cultural and political independence of the United States.

Yet, possessing an economy that relies heavily on the United States to provide credit, make investments, send tourists, buy its products and even absorb its unemployed in the shape of illegal migrants, Mexico remains unavoidably vulnerable to developments north of the 2,000-mile-long border.

During the past five years, however, Echeverria has chosen to ignore this economic dependence and has instead sought to tap the grudging resentment many Mexicans feel toward the United States through third world rhetoric that has not infrequently smacked of anti-Americanism.

Taking their cue from the President, Mexican officials, congressmen and newspapers have also singled out the U.S. government, Congress, private companies, bankers, farmers and even correspondents as somehow responsible for Mexican and third world problems as varied as inflation and terrorism.

IN PRIVATE, Echeverria himself has frequently urged senior U.S. officials and businessmen to ignore his rhetorical statements as a political necessity destined exclusively for domestic consumption.

The view that the crisis in U.S.-Mexican relations is specifically linked to Echeverria's attitude toward Washington is further strengthened by the absence of a wave of anti-Americanism among the Mexican population at large.

In business circles and in the tourist industry, many Mexicans even vocally blame their president's attacks on the United States for the contraction of economic activity.

Echeverria, however, has grown ever more convinced of the need for "a new world economic order" to rescue the third world from its poverty, a belief that he has translated into attacks on the United States and other industrialized nations.

Frequently reminding Washington of its role in the overthrow of the late President Salvador Allende of Chile, the Mexican leader has also complained that speculation against the Mexican currency, a recent American Jewish tourist boycott, attacks on his regime by U.S. congressmen and even isolated acts of terrorism are part of a "destabilization" plan inspired by "outside forces" — a euphemism for the United States.

Paradoxically, though, the Mexican government remains highly sensitive about its image in the United States. For example, at the same time as Echeverria is lambasting the United States for opposing world economic reforms, the government spends millions of dollars on advertising trying to convince American investors and tourists that they are welcome here.

Yet foreign diplomats here are convinced that most recent bilateral squabbles have been about issues that would otherwise be ignored — or at least dealt with routinely — were it not for the underlying tensions in the relationship.

For example, apparently angered by frequent U.S. complaints about ill-treatment of American prisoners here, the Mexican government is now encouraging newspaper articles about alleged ill-treatment of Mexicans in American jails.

Yet, because power in Mexico is so centralized in the figure of the president and policy reflects the incumbent's tiniest whim, foreign diplomats expect a radical improvement of bilateral relations once Lopez Portillo takes office.

Aides close to Lopez Portillo insist that the incoming president will probably be tougher than Echeverria when negotiating trade and other agreements with the United States.

HOWDY DOODY'S OLD FANS CROWD OUT KIDS

Knight News Service

MIAMI — The problem has been to keep alumni from crowding out the new generation at those tapings here in Video City of "The New Howdy Doody Show," a syndicated revival of the children's show classic of the 1940s.

When executive producers E. Roger Muir and Nick Nicholson and the show's host, "Buffalo Bob" Smith, started inviting live audiences to the tapings more than two months ago, they found young adults who had been "Howdy Doody" fans as kids were outnumbering the youngsters having their first exposure to the show.

"It's nice to have those older loyal fans coming into the studio," said Jack Drury, who manages the publicity, "but we've had to restrict admission of adults to those accompa-wise, the younger crowd would never get in."

Already sold to 36 major markets, the new version of "Howdy Doody," which was a children's favorite for 13 years on NBC, is a completely updated one with new music, new gimmicks and much more audience participation than there was in the old days when it was produced in the studios of New York's WNEW.

Still the same is big, effusive Buffalo Bob, who came out of retirement several years back to find he still had an audience of nostalgia-struck college students who flocked to his concerts on the college circuit. And last year the plans for reviving the old series were set in motion.

Thus far eight or nine weeks of tapings, or 35 shows, have been completed. Production will continue throughout the balance of the summer and into the fall.

New fire splits job of control

LAKE BERRYESSA (AP) — Fire licked through 5,000 acres of oak and brushland Sunday, while a new fire flared up six miles to the south, forcing fire fighters to split their strength between the two.

A spokesman for the California Division of Forestry said they hoped to have both fires contained by tonight.

In Sequoia National Park in Tulare County, meanwhile, 25 to 30 fire fighters were called to battle a dozen small blazes started by lightning storms in the area Saturday night. Spokesman Hank Jones said the largest was three to four acres and had been contained late Saturday night.

SOME 700 fire fighters were battling the two large blazes five miles south of Lake Berryessa, which is in Napa County. The first fire broke out Saturday morning on Mount Vacca in Solano County and quickly moved north into rugged, steep terrain where fire fighters had trouble maneuvering their equipment.

By Sunday, the spokesman said, it was about half contained.

The second fire began Saturday night and covered 500 acres by Sunday, when the spokesman estimated it was about 30 percent ringed by fire lines.

Eight aerial tankers were dropping fire retardant chemicals on the two blazes while fire fighters maneuvered some 40 trucks and other heavy equipment on the ground.

Lightning kills man; woman badly burned

BAKERSFIELD (AP) — A 23-year-old Taft man was killed and his female companion was seriously injured when they were struck by lightning at the Kern County Fairgrounds here, sheriff's deputies said Sunday.

The victims, whose names were not immediately released, were attending motorcycle races Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and were climbing out of a pickup truck when the lightning bolt hit the man.

The woman apparently was burned by a flash-back. She was taken to the Kern County Medical Center where she was reported in fair condition Sunday in the intensive care unit.

Burglars get guns

Restaurant Finds New Owners Through IPT Classifieds

When Meredith Reese of 9329 E. Artesia Street, Bellflower, decided to retire from the restaurant business, she turned to an Independent Press-Telegram Classified ad to sell her cafe. A low-cost, far-reaching 12-day Classified easily brought in a pair of new owners.

Whether you're selling a business or used furniture, no job is too large or small for IPT Classifieds. Call 422-5959 for the expert assistance of an IPT advisor.

As governor, a record of paradoxes

Carter, a secretive man who calls for candor

By PHIL GAILEY and AARON EPSTEIN
Knight News Service

ATLANTA — To those who wonder what kind of a president he'd be, Jimmy Carter replied: "Look at the kind of governor I was."

If his record as governor of Georgia from 1971 to 1974 is a clue, the 51-year-old Carter would bring to the White House enormous energy, stamina and self-discipline, and a zeal for reform, planning and management.

He would at times be combative, vindictive, self-confident — sometimes even self-righteous. "We'll fight the bastards" together," he wrote to one state official who allied himself with Carter early in his administration.

Knight News Service reporters spent three weeks in Georgia researching Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter's record as governor. They found that he can be secretive, while publicly advocating candor; and receptive of lobbyists' favors while denouncing that political practice. This is the second report of the Knight News Service investigation.

And he would not always be able to live up to the high standards he publicly set for himself.

As governor, he loathed secrecy while being secretive; denounced lobbyists while accepting favors from some of them, and held aloft a banner of candor which didn't always cover him.

Yet, despite the contradictions, Carter did much to raise the ethical standards of government in a state not known for them.

He's a hungry politician, and even his closest associates aren't sure what drives him.

Little things reveal the man. He loves to tinker with the nuts and bolts of government, like a mechanic trying to tune a race car engine. "The thing that I like, perhaps best, about government is the detailed administration," he once said.

"He's a superb executive," said Atlanta banker Bert Lance, who served as Carter's transportation chief. "His imaginative tactics are homework and hard work."

He prizes time to the point that punctuality is an obsession.

Jim Parham, head of Georgia's Department of Human Resources, recalls when Carter invited some of his department heads to accompany him on a "listening" tour of the state. One official was not there by scheduled departure time, so Carter ordered the plane to take off without him.

Carter seemed to resent those who would waste his time, and, as a result, he preferred to work from memos. He wrote his own in longhand, hundreds of them, about everything from a dam project to a leaky faucet in a Capitol restroom.

"He can get a lot more work done that way," explained William L. Harper, who served as Carter's legal aide. "He felt like he wasted a lot of his time meeting with people in his office on things that could be covered in a brief memo."

Viking 2 probes for marsquakes

PASADENA (AP) — The Viking 2's robot lander began probing for marsquakes Sunday and sent back to Earth color photos of the red field and orange sky over Mars' plain of Utopia.

Mission director Tom Young said that all systems aboard the lander checked out "just fine" and that soil-sampling experiments should begin late this week.

and "quite clearly operating as expected," Latham said.

Viking 2 also gave earthmen a weather report Sunday, logging a noontime temperature in Utopia of 35 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit — about 5 degrees colder than the resting place of Viking 1.

Scientists said all Viking 2's equipment seemed to be working well and what at first appeared to be a rip on its dish-shaped radio antenna may have been a splotch of mud. Scientists said the craft may have kicked some dirt onto the scanner during its lopsided landing and that would account for the dark slash-like line on the device.

Young said that Viking 2's complicated gas chromatograph-mass spectrometer experiment was ready to receive its first sample of soil late this week. The spectrometer scans the sample, then reports the chemical elements contained in it.

The gas-release experiment will be looking particularly for signs of

Storm mars holiday weekend

By DICK HOWLAND and BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writers

A quick-moving thunderstorm Sunday evening lashed parts of the Southland with hailstones and lightning, causing power black-outs in the homes of an estimated 10,000 residents.

Lightning bolts hit transmitters atop Mt. Wilson late Sunday night, shutting off television and radio station signals for several minutes.

The storm capped a showery, muggy day that was discouraging to many persons attempting to celebrate the last days of summer outdoors in traditional Labor Day weekend style.

There were no reports of injury from the lightning storm, which played havoc with the Orange County and South Bay areas and kept Southern California Edison Co. emergency crews busy restoring downed power lines.

An Edison spokesman said about 1,000 customers, mainly in the South Bay area, were without service from a few minutes to a couple of hours.

Bay Harbor Hospital in Harbor City was forced to use emergency power generators, and Santa Monica police reported their switchboard was out of service for ten minutes.

Workers for the county's Department of Water and Power reported 200 to 300 electrical wires out of commission in the Bell Gardens and Huntington Park area.

In Orange County, authorities reported several lightning-related blackouts and said large hailstones fell intermittently through the evening.

The storm, caused by a high altitude low-pressure area just southwest of Long Beach, was expected to move northward over the mountains by this morning.

Variable clouds were forecast for today in the Long Beach area with the chance of rain decreasing to near zero.

Long Beach lifeguards reported a "very quiet day" Sunday with 60,000 beachgoers, eight rescues and six boat assists — low numbers for a Labor Day weekend.

The high temperature for Long Beach was 83 degrees. Only a trace of rain was recorded.

Another 300,000 sunbathers visited the shore from Huntington Beach to Malibu. Beach attendance was normal in some areas, but smaller than usual for a Labor Day weekend in most places. Light surf with low tides held down the number of swimmers that had to be rescued, although one lifeguard said there were more first-aid calls than usual due to "excessive drinking."

The only lifeguards who had to work very hard were nine guards who completed a grueling week-long journey from Point Conception to Huntington Beach, running 200 miles and swimming another 40 miles.

Raymond Bray, junior lifeguard instructor, said 14 Huntington Beach junior guards started the trip Aug. 29 as a challenge and to see the coastline firsthand. Nine finished; the

RUSS PILOT PULLS GUN IN JAPAN

TOKYO (AP) — A Soviet jet fighter made an emergency landing today at the Hakodate airport, at the southern tip of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, the Defense Agency announced.

The twin-jet MIG25 overran the runway when it landed, the agency said. Unconfirmed reports said the Soviet pilot brandished a pistol to keep airport officials away from his plane.

Jet hijackers quit, free 80

LARNACA, Cyprus (AP) — Three Palestinian hijackers released the 75 passengers and five crew members of a Dutch jetliner Sunday in exchange for a safe-conduct promise from Greek Cypriot authorities, airport officials said.

The freed hostages, including two Americans, were brought to the airport terminal building by bus from the DC9 that had been parked at the edge of this small airport's runway for four hours.

THE hijackers commandeered the jet Saturday over France and hopped-scotched around the Mediterranean through the night and morning, threatening to blow up the plane and all aboard unless Israel released eight prisoners.

The passengers greeted Georgios Tombazos, the Cypriot minister of communications and works, who led the negotiations, with cheers and applause. One American among them, Otto Horsting of Selma, Ala., said the ordeal had been "scary."

"The hijackers grasped hand grenades and modern-looking guns," Horsting said. "We were told the plane was hijacked almost as soon as we left Nice."

"The hijackers did not ill-treat us. They said this was the only way they could make the world realize what was happening in their country, Palestine. They assured us that we would not be harmed," he said.

An official of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines said the passengers and crew would be flown to Amsterdam.

Azores crash blamed on hurricane

PONTA DELGADA, Azores (AP) — The crash of a Venezuelan air force transport which killed 68 persons — most of them members of a college choir — was caused by an apparent navigational error during a hurricane, Portuguese officials said Sunday.

Officials said the plane tried to land at the U.S. base at Lajes amid strong winds and poor visibility caused by advancing Hurricane Emmy which, followed by a rare back-to-back hurricane, Frances, whirled through the Azores at the weekend.

Emmy produced thick low clouds, high winds and driving rain in the path of the airliner.

The C130 made two unsuccessful landing attempts, then on the third approach came in 400 yards to one side of the runway, officials said. The Lajes control tower radioed instructions to correct the plane's position, but the aircraft turned even farther from the runway and crashed about 1,000 yards away, the officials said.

The officials emphasized that their findings were preliminary and subject to correction by a probe by Venezuelan inspectors who flew to the Azores on Sunday.

Earlier reports of an engine fire in the plane moments before the accident appeared incorrect, the Portuguese officials said.

The choir was bound for a song festival in Barcelona, Spain. The Portuguese news agency ANOP reported that all receptions and other social events at the festival had been cancelled.

Airplane crash in Canada kills 10

FRASERDALE, Canada (AP) — A single-engine Otter aircraft attempting to land in fog on the Abitibi River crashed Saturday, killing all 10 persons aboard.

A spokesman for the plane's owners said Sunday the victims included officials of the Ontario royal commission on electric power planning.

Ted Nobbs, secretary of Austin Airways, said the plane, equipped with floats, may have been attempting to land because of weather conditions. It was on a charter flight from Moosonee to Timmins.

Provincial police said the plane went down in heavy fog after hitting high-tension power lines near a hydro-electric dam.

Nobbs said the pilot, Douglas Norman Clifford, 28, of White River, had been with Austin Airways about 1½ years and had more than 2,000 hours flying time.

In Toronto, Dennis Timbrell, Ontario energy minister, said the dead included two members of the royal commission staff, three representatives from Treaty No. 9, a northern Ontario Indian group, three Ontario Hydro officials, and a news reporter.

Their names were not released pending notification of relatives.

Ford asked to double Medicaid fraud probe

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — Health, Education and Welfare Secretary David Mathews said Sunday he has asked President Ford to more than double the number of investigators probing Medicaid fraud.

Mathews commented to reporters following an appearance on CBS' "Face the Nation" during which he said "unless we improve the design no number of investigators will take care of the problem" of fraud in the $15 billion federal-state program.

Mathews' remarks came exactly one week after a Senate Special Committee on Aging reported that rampant fraud and abuse existed in the 10-year-old program designed to provide low-cost health care for the poor.

Mathews had been quoted as saying that committee chairman Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, was "grandstanding." Asked if that was an accurate quote, Mathews replied that he thought Moss "went to great lengths to dramatize the problem," adding "I welcome that."

In March, Mathews announced the formation of a special task force to ferret out the nursing homes and doctors who he said have been overcharging the government $750 million a year for treating poor people.

At that time, Mathews said the HEW task force would include 108 federal Medicaid examiners and 74 criminal investigators. Asked Sunday about the need for more investigators, Mathews replied "it's quite possible we will have to increase the number."

He acknowledged, during an informal conversation with reporters following the program, that he has asked Ford to double the number of investigators.

Union boycott set

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. — About 3,000 textile workers and union supporters rallied Sunday to protest what they called the reluctance of a major textile firm to agree to a contract after two years of negotiations.

The Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union, backed by the AFL-CIO, plans to kick off a nationwide boycott today of the products of J.P. Stevens Co., the nation's second-largest textile manufacturer, which operates about 80 plants in the Southeast.

Stevens makes a wide range of textile products including sheets and clothing material sold under other labels by department stores and discount centers around the nation.

Two years ago, about 3,600 workers at seven Stevens plant in Roanoke Rapids voted to unionize. They were the first plants in the South to support a union. The union has since filed a charge with the National Labor Relations Board complaining that Stevens has refused to bargain in good faith as required by federal law.

Stevens said the pro-union vote represented only 7 per cent of its employees.

Optimism in Lebanon

BEIRUT — Despite increased hostilities, al Fatah, the main Palestinian guerrilla organization, expects to make "positive steps" this week toward ending the fighting in Lebanon and the guerrillas' confrontation with Syria, according to Abu Hassan Salamah, the head of Fatah's security section.

Abu Hassan spoke after separate meetings with Elias Sarkis, Lebanon's president-elect; Pierre Gemayel, the leader of the Christian Phalange party, and Patriarch Antonius Khoreish, the spiritual head of Lebanon's largest Christian community, the Maronites.

Abu Hassan is a top aide to Yasir Arafat, the leader and founder of al Fatah and chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the national union comprising several guerrilla factions.

Yanks' assassin slain

TEHRAN — Iranian security agents killed one of the assassins of three California civilians after tracing him through the Volkswagen used in the ambush of the Americans a week ago.

An official statement said Hassan Ellaj-Pour, allegedly a member of the Islamic Marxist urban guerrilla group blamed for the killing of the Americans, was found Thursday. It said he opened fire on the government agents and was killed. It did not say where the battle occurred.

Quake hits Mexico

MEXICO CITY — An earthquake hit some 175 miles southwest of Mexico City Sunday afternoon. Seismologists at the University of Mexico said the quake registered 5.5 on the Richter scale and was felt in Mexico City as a light tremor. The epicenter was between Acapulco and Manzanillo. There were no reports of damages or injuries.

Spain's left challenges

MADRID — Spain's leftist political opposition, claiming it is on the way to forming a united front, challenged the government Sunday to speed democratic reforms. Meeting together for the first time in 40 years, representatives of more than 60 illegal political parties and labor groups reached preliminary agreement to form a single organization, spokesmen said.

Bernhard's ties stir a wave of questions

Combined News Services

Disclosures that Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands retained links with Northrop Corp. as well as the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. have stirred a wave of questions in The Hague about the prince's financial dealings, his personal life and his ties to the CIA.

To senior Dutch officials as well as to journalists, the scandal involving Bernhard is still a jigsaw puzzle whose pieces have not yet fallen in place. "The question is why did he actually do this, was it greed, what was it?" asks one foreign ministry official.

The 65-year-old German-born prince earned a salary of $300,000 a year and is married to one of one world's richest women. Queen Juliana receives a tax-free salary of about $1.3 million and has a private fortune estimated at $12 million, although this may be a conservative estimate.

On the face of it, according to Dutch officials, Bernhard hardly needed money, yet by 1974 he told Lockheed that he was "bitter" that the company had not acknowledged his services and asked, somewhat petulantly, for a $1-million commission.

Carl A. Kotchian, Lockheed's former president, told a Senate hearing that he (Bernhard) would lead you to believe that the queen has him on a tight budget.

"He usually said there were great demands upon him for charitable donations in Holland and internationally and he had a great interest in wildlife and he had to pay the money out for that," Kotchian said.

Bernhard — who was used by the government over the past three decades as an energetic royal salesman of Dutch goods — traveled widely and led a frenetic jet-set life compared with Queen Juliana, a matronly and shy royal figure.

British and Dutch newspapers have commented widely about his relationship with Countess Helene Lejeune — nicknamed "Poupette" — the daughter of a prominent surgeon. The countess lives in Paris.

Perhaps the most intriguing elements to the Bernhard mystery are his reported ties to the CIA.

One reliable source close to the government said that last February, when Premier Joop den Uyl asked Bernhard about the allegations that linked him to Lockheed, the prince laughed and denied any wrongdoing. Bernhard said, however: "If you would ask me about my relations with the CIA, that would be a different matter."

Kelley to wed ex-nun

Clarence M. Kelley, who got a vote of confidence as FBI director Saturday from President Ford, announced over the weekend that he plans to marry a former nun sometime this year.

At a Kansas City dinner in his honor Saturday night, Kelley said no date has been set for his marriage to Shirley Dyckes, who lives at the Watergate Complex in Washington. She is an elementary public-school teacher in Prince Georges County, Md.

Miss Dyckes, whom Kelley said he had known only five or six months, said she was a member of the Sisters of Holy Cross for 15 years. She would not reveal her age. She said she holds a master's degree in Latin American history from Catholic University.

Kelley, 64, said his future bride withdrew from the religious order about six years ago.

Kelley is a member of the Country Club Christian Church in Kansas City, where he was chief of police before being named head of the FBI in 1973.

Kelley's first wife, Ruby, died Nov. 9, 1975, of cancer after an extended illness. She was 64.

New church

An 85-year-old black woman breathed life into a 21-year-old dream in East Granby, Conn., Sunday as she led the first service in the church she built with her own money and her own hands.

"I hope this little baby being born today is not stillborn but may come of age with God's other churches," said Rushia West as she stood at the pulpit — an antique high-boy radio. A congregation of 85 whites and blacks joined in prayers and gospel hymns.

Mrs. West, who came from Smithfield, Ga., in 1917 to work in the cigar-tobacco fields of the Connecticut Valley, conceived the idea of a nondenominational church when her mother died in 1955. She fought the local zoning board and developers to see it completed.

The church is only the second in town and the first to be dedicated since 1840.

A warning

The American democratic society will be pulled down by forces of lawlessness and eventually replaced by an authoritarian state unless the country gets millions of unemployed persons back to work, United Auto Workers president Leonard Woodcock said Sunday.

"You cannot have a democratic society and look into the future and see 7 per cent-plus unemployment, without having crime get out of control (and) having antisocial forces get out of control," Woodcock said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

He proposed as solutions to the problem a reduction in the current 40-hour week to create new job opportunities, and the remobilization of a National Youth Administration.

L.B. newsmen in jailing protest

FRESNO (AP) — About 100 persons demonstrated at the courthouse here Sunday to show solidarity with four Fresno, Bee newsmen jailed for protesting a confidential source.

Among the marchers was a former reporter, U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston, who said he "first learned as a newsman in Nazi Germany what happens when you lose freedom of the press." Cranston, D-Calif., was a news-service reporter before entering politics.

The protesters included reporters from other parts of California, including a contingent from the Long Beach-Los Angeles area.

There were no shouted slogans or militant arm-waving as the group, accustomed to reporting about demonstrations instead of marching in them, walked quietly around the courthouse several times.

Some wore T-shirts emblazoned with "Free the Bee Four," and several carried signs supporting the newsmen, who were spending their third day in custody at an honor farm about 20 miles west of this central California city.

"I think it is an outrage that these four and others have to go to prison to protect the First Amendment rights of all of us," Cranston said.

He said reporting from confidential sources "led to the end of the Vietnam war and the revelations of Watergate."

A resolution supporting the Bee Four was adopted by a committee of the United Farm Workers Union at a political endorsement convention here.

The Bee Four, getting their first visits from friends and family since being jailed Friday, sent the demonstrators a message of thanks.

"We all share the same code of professional ethics," the jailed newsmen said.

One of the four, Fresno Bee reporter Joe Rosato, said Sunday in a telephone interview from the prison farm that he and the others found the biggest problem so far was learning the ropes and routines of prison life.

"Everything's so new to us," he said. "We're just finding our way around, which is not too difficult because we can't go anywhere."

The four, including managing editor George Gruner, 51, ombudsman James Bort, 51, reporter William Patterson, 49, and Rosato, 34, were jailed

Friday after a lengthy legal battle to get their open-ended sentences overturned.

They argued it was pointless to give them indefinite sentences to force them to reveal a confidential source, because they have promised they will never tell how they obtained material from a sealed transcript of a grand jury investigation. Their story about the bribery case against a Fresno city councilman was published in January 1975.

George Laine, president of the Los Angeles chapter of the American Newspaper Guild, said two dozen reporters and editors from the Los Angeles area were in Fresno.

Laine, an organizer of the demonstration, said they were joined by reporters and editors from San Francisco, San Jose, Sacramento, Stockton and Modesto.

The law says the four newsmen, as civil prisoners, must be kept separate from the honor farm's criminal inmates, all jailed on misdemeanor convictions.

Rosato said the four are restricted to one pathway outside their barracks. They eat in a room isolated from the others and they bunk together in a separate barracks.

"The closest other barracks are, say, 50 yards away," Rosato said. "The other inmates sit on the lawn and they look at us and we sit on the lawn and look at them."

Gruner said earlier he was glad the battle had moved to what may become a more public arena.

"A long, involved legal battle doesn't stir people," he said. "But when four men are put in jail for defending a principle, the public wants to know, 'Hey, what's going on here?'"

The sentence was imposed by Superior Court Hollis Best after the four refused to tell him how they got the material.

On Thursday, the California Supreme Court refused to hear their case and Friday, five hours after they checked into jail, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to delay their sentences pending an appeal there.

L.A. GIRL ABDUCTED, ASSAULTED

Associated Press

A badly beaten 2½-year-old girl believed to have been kidnapped was found Sunday several blocks from her South Los Angeles home after an intensive search by police.

Antoinette Welch, who police said was sexually assaulted, was reported in fair condition at USC-County Medical Center.

Police said the girl's parents last saw her when they put her to bed around midnight Saturday. An intruder apparently entered an open window in the bedroom.

Police were combing the area in which the girl was found at 11 a.m. in an effort to find her abductor.

$2 million heroin seized; 5 arrested

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A federal narcotics task force seized 15 pounds of heroin worth an estimated $2 million in a raid that ended with the arrest of five persons, authorities said Sunday.

Federal Drug Enforcement Administration agent Caron Durel said officers also confiscated 11 rifles and shotguns, eight handguns, $108,000 in cash and a variety of stereo equipment, televisions and other suspected stolen property.

Arrested Saturday afternoon were Raymond Moreno, 40; his wife Jody, 26; John Goodman, 22; Robert Van Deventer, 40; and Duane Dundas, 45, all of San Diego.

Durel said the five, being held in the federal correctional center in San Diego for investigation of possession of drugs, conspiracy to sell drugs and distribution of contraband, will be arraigned Tuesday.

He said the raid at the Moreno house followed a two-week investigation by officials in San Diego and New Orleans, the apparent destination of the drugs.

Using a search warrant, agents from the federal agency, the San Diego police and the county sheriff's department entered the house, allegedly finding heroin in several places, including a crawl space in the attic.

Durel said the house apparently was a major distribution center for drug traffic. He said "at least one other" arrest is expected in connection with the investigation.

Commuters surveyed

Lanes hit as bad gas-savers

Associated Press

Almost three-quarters of the commuters who regularly use the Santa Monica Freeway believe the Diamond Lane project was a poor way to conserve energy, a survey indicated Sunday.

The survey by Corey Research of Los Angeles said 494 persons who use the freeway were questioned about the car-pool lane experiment, which was ended by a court order Aug. 13.

The survey showed that 73.3 per cent believed the Diamond Lanes were a poor way to conserve energy, with 14.4 per cent rating the lanes fair and 10.7 per cent good.

An overwhelming 84.8 per cent said they would vote against the lanes if given the opportunity.

Sixty-nine per cent concluded it took them longer to reach their destination while the Diamond Lanes were in effect, but 8.9 per cent said the project made their traveling time shorter and 12.8 per cent said the lanes did not change traveling time.

Of those who believed their trips took longer, 28.2 per cent said the extra time was up to 10 minutes, 44.9 per cent said 20 minutes and 18.5 per cent said half an hour was added to traveling time.

Slightly more than 70 per cent said they sometimes avoided the freeway while the Diamond Lanes were in effect, using surface streets or other freeways.

The project, which reserved one lane of the freeway for use by car pools and buses, was intended to conserve energy and decrease traffic congestion by discouraging commuters from driving alone in cars.

U.S. Dist. Judge Matt Byrne ordered a halt to the project in response to a citizens' lawsuit.

Gunman hurts 3 in bar shootings

Three persons were shot early Sunday when a man who was banned from a Signal Hill bar fired a revolver into the crowded establishment, police said.

All three were reported in good condition at Long Beach Community Hospital, and a 29-year-old Rosemead man was later arrested in connection with the shootings.

Security guard William Dalzell, 28, who lives in a downtown Long Beach hotel, was hit once in the hip after he refused the gunman admittance to the Foothill Cafe, 1922 Cherry Ave.

Also injured were Barbara Neisler, 37, of 320 E. Fifth St., and Patrick Rooney, age unknown, of South Gate.

Police said Jaime Cruz of Rosemead was arrested about a block from the bar shortly after the 12:30 a.m. shooting and booked on charges of assault with intent to commit murder.

Officers were told the gunman fired a .32-caliber revolver into the bar, which held more than 100 persons.

Cypress girl wounded; 'mistaken for coyote'

A 17-year-old Cypress girl camping in an Oregon park was accidentally wounded by a man who thought he was shooting at a coyote, authorities said Sunday.

Debra Wilkerson, of 4742 Marion Circle, was about to go to sleep in Big Creek County Park, east of Astoria, Saturday night when she heard three gunshots.

Two of the bullets narrowly missed her head, and the third struck her in the shoulder.

Oregon State Police reported that an Astoria man, Daniel Bartlett, told them he had fired shots at what he thought was a coyote.

Miss Wilkerson said she would not press charges. She was treated at an Astoria hospital and released.

Harbor City resident killed

A 66-year-old Harbor City man was killed Sunday in western New York when his wife accidentally backed their motor home over him, authorities said.

Charles S. Blackman, of 1430 Pacific Coast Highway, was pronounced dead at the scene by a county coroner in Ripley, N.Y.

According to Chautauqua County deputies, Blackman was under the vehicle making repairs and asked his wife to give it some gas. The gear slipped into reverse and the motor home backed over Blackman's chest. No charges were filed, deputies said.

Youth killed in party stabbing

SIMI VALLEY (AP) — A 16-year-old Simi Valley youth was fatally stabbed in the chest early Sunday at what police said was a drinking party and a 17-year-old youth was booked for investigation of murder.

Police declined to identify the suspect in the killing of Scott Alan Hall. They said 40 youths were at the party, but the motive for the stabbing was not known.

Royal treatment

Are property owners who receive royalties from oil wells on their property entitled to the 22 per cent oil depletion allowance? F.O.H., Wilmington.

You may be entitled to the depletion allowance, but you'll have to check with the oil company issuing your royalty checks to be sure. A royalty recipient may qualify for the depletion allowance if the yield from the oil wells on his lot or from the oil field which includes his property does not exceed 1,800 barrels daily, explained a spokesman for the Internal Revenue Service. You should check with the oil company that pays your royalties to determine the daily oil yield for your area. The oil and gas depletion allowance was enacted in 1929 to spur the exploration of petroleum resources. It allowed oil companies to deduct 22 per cent from their gross income before paying taxes. This allowance was eliminated last year for the largest oil companies—those with annual incomes exceeding $35 million. Petroleum companies earning less than $7 million a year are still allowed the full oil depletion allowance, and a partial exemption is permitted those companies whose annual earnings fall between $7 million and $35 million. The depletion allowance gradually is being phased out altogether, with the daily oil yield and the daily oil-field limit that determines eligibility being lowered each year.

Social Security

My mother is retired and is receiving her own Social Security benefits. My father died recently and she will be getting a life insurance settlement soon. She also may get a cash settlement from a pending lawsuit. Will her Social Security payments be reduced to compensate for this additional income? R.V., Long Beach.

No. Income from sources such as insurance or lawsuit settlements, gifts or income tax refunds does not affect an individual's Social Security retirement benefits. Only money earned through employment must be reported to the Social Security Administration, said a spokesman for that agency's Long Beach office. However, recipients of Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits must report any additional income or earnings, he said, and their benefits will be reduced to compensate for the additional money received.

Old sport

I would like to know if there is any age limit for participation in the Olympics. Does a person who starts a sport late in life, such as in his twenties, have a chance to compete in the Olympics if he is good at his sport? H.S., Long Beach.

There are no minimum or maximum age limits for the Olympics, said a spokesman for the U.S. Olympic Committee headquarters in New York, but it is suggested that young girls not participate in the gymnastics event until they are 14 years old. Most American competitors are young because it is while they are in school that they have the time, energy and financial backing for the extensive training necessary for competition. But if a person excels in a sport, no matter what his age, he is eligible to try out for the regional Olympic trials. One of the oldest contenders in the Montreal Olympics in July was a 48-year-old Canadian, Alex Oakley, who competed in his fifth Olympics this year. He never has won a medal, and this year in his event, the 20-kilometer walk, he finished 35th in a field of 36. In the 1972 Olympics, a 72-year-old athlete from Monaco competed in the skeet-shooting event.

Ford and Carter trade jabs as warmup to campaign kickoff

By CHRIS FRENCH
Associated Press

President Ford and challenger Jimmy Carter jabbed at each other in magazine interviews released Sunday as Carter prepared formally to open his Democratic campaign today.

Ford has delayed for a week the formal start of his campaign to return to the White House.

CARTER will deliver his kick-off speech from the front porch of the vacation cottage of Franklin D. Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga. Two of Roosevelt's sons, Franklin Jr. and James, are expected to be on hand.

In separate interviews published in this week's issue of U.S. News & World Report, Ford said Carter would add $100 billion to federal spending, while the Democratic presidential nominee labeled Ford a "dormant, inactive President."

Ford provided no details to support his charge, but he cited as an example what he called Carter's support for creation of a consumer protection agency, which Ford said was "totally unnecessary."

Carter said he felt the Ford administration is free of any taint of Watergate, "but, as far as just adopting what Nixon's policies were and continuing them, I don't think there's been absolute continuity there."

In the formal opening speech of the campaign, Carter was expected to emphasize some of the general themes that have dominated his campaign — the need for new leadership, fresh ideas and vision, and the restoration of trust in Washington.

Carter planned to say that President Ford is incapable of meeting the needs because he is part of the problem.

Ford's running mate, Sen. Bob Dole, said over the weekend that he was questioned by federal prosecutors in another matter involving allegedly illegal contributions from Gulf Oil Corp.

Dole said he did not know if that meant he was being investigated, but he acknowledged he was called before a grand jury March 8 on the matter.

DOLE said he never received any illegal funds from Gulf — either directly or through Pennsylvania Republican Hugh Scott, the Senate minority leader.

Scott has been accused of receiving up to $100,000 from Gulf lobbyist Claude C. Wild Jr. between 1960 and 1973.

Scott has said he never knowingly accepted corporate funds from Gulf. Such donations are illegal. Scott also said whatever money he received was used for his campaigns and those of other GOP senators.

In an airport news conference Saturday in Warwick, R.I., Dole said that special prosecutors had visited him in February and had asked him to go before a federal grand jury investigating the Gulf matter.

Few upsets seen in four primaries

Associated Press

Four states hold congressional primaries Tuesday with few surprises expected.

The race attracting the most attention involves Rep. Robert Sikes, a Florida Democrat recently reprimanded by the House for failing to disclose a possible conflict of interest involving financial dealings and his chairmanship of the military construction appropriations subcommittee. He faces a challenge from John Benton Jr. of Panama City.

IN ARIZONA, Rep. Morris Udall, who lost his race for the Democratic presidential nomination, is opposed in his renomination bid, but is expected to win.

His opponent, Tucson City Councilman Ruben Romero, says, "I think it's time we gave Democrats a choice."

Republicans and Democrats in Arizona are also holding primaries to select nominees for the U.S. Senate seat being given up by retiring Sen. Paul Fannin.

Reps. Sam Steiger, 47, and John Conlan, 46, are seeking the GOP nomination. In the Democratic Senate primary, Carolyn Warner, 46, the state education superintendent, Dennis DeConcini, 39, and former state Atty. Gen. Wade Church, 68, are running for the nomination.

House Minority Leader John Rhodes of the 1st District faces a weak challenge from Louis Stradling, 59, a fellow Mesa, Ariz., resident, and city council member.

Pat Fullinwider, a Tempe housewife, is running unopposed for the Democratic nomination which she won in 1974.

In Nevada, Democratic Sen. Howard Cannon is expected to defeat his two challengers for renomination, C. Hardison Cundiff of Las Vegas and Rowena von Wolff of Fernley. Three Republicans are seeking their party's nomination. They are former congressman David Towell of Minden, Sam Cavnar and Robert Charles, both of Las Vegas.

There is also one contested congressional primary in Connecticut, along with a gubernatorial primary in North Dakota.

Carter seen as voters' 'own'

By LOUIS HARRIS

The voters may have given Jimmy Carter a sizeable lead over Gerald Ford at this point in the campaign, but they seem to feel that the President's, rather than Carter's, political philosophy is closer to their own.

This would seem to be a disadvantage for Carter, but he manages to offset it by coming across as more conservative to conservative voters, more middle of the road to middle of the roaders, and more liberal to liberals. He has demonstrated a remarkable ability to make voters of each ideological stripe believe he is one of their own.

THIS MAY BE CHANGING, however. In the month after Carter was nominated, the number of voters who view him as "liberal" went up from 20 to 26 per cent, while those describing him as "conservative" dropped from 19 to 17 per cent, and "middle of the road" from 38 to 31 per cent. The 57 per cent majority who thought that Carter was either a moderate or conservative in July declined to 48 per cent in August.

At the same time, 72 per cent of the electorate sees President Ford as either "conservative" (38 per cent) or "middle of the road" (36 per cent). By contrast, only 5 per cent think he is a "liberal." Voters see him as slightly less conservative with the passage of time.

All of this becomes quite revealing when it is seen in the light of how voters view themselves. Thirty one per cent view themselves as conservative, 41 per cent as middle of the road, 18 per cent as liberal, and 3 per cent as radical left.

CARTER'S KNACK FOR appealing to different groups can be seen in these findings: Although 17 per cent of all voters think he is a conservative, a higher 24 per cent of conservatives see him as one of their own. Compared to the 31 per cent of the country which identifies Carter as middle of the road, a much higher 39 per cent of the middle of the roaders think Carter shares their views. While 26 per cent of all voters consider Carter liberal, a much higher 39 per cent of all liberals do.

Whether Carter can continue to achieve this kind of differing appeal to different segments of the political spectrum may be one of the keys to the ultimate outcome of the election.

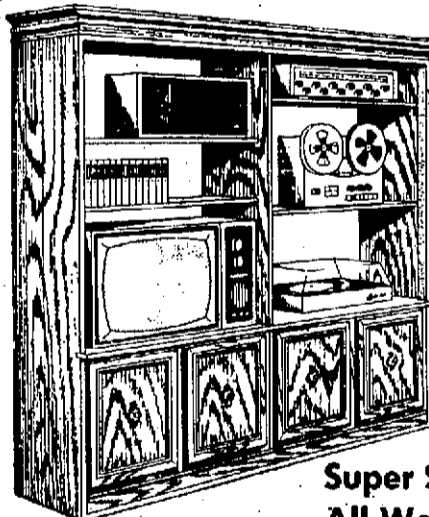

Ironically, the biggest disparity in the perception of Carter's political philosophy exists in the South, where he holds a commanding 68 to 28 per cent lead. In the South, 33 per cent of the voters view themselves as conservatives and another 36 per cent as middle of the road. Yet, only 19 per cent of southerners believe Carter to be conservative, while 26 per cent think of him as middle of the road. And although only 12 per cent of all southerners see themselves as liberals, 29 per cent believe Carter is liberal. In the South, Carter will be testing regional pride and loyalty against considerable differences over political philosophy.

PAST HARRIS SURVEYS have shown that such neat classifications as "liberal" or "conservative" no longer fit political thinking in this country. Politicians and political journalists tend to see far more significance in ideology than the public does. A recent Harris Survey showed that only 43 per cent of the American people preferred to choose a candidate for president on the basis of his ideology, while the rest of the electorate votes according to which candidate will most improve the quality of life.

In an odd way, however, political philosophy has been a key element in this year's elective process. At the Republican convention there was a good deal of talk about whether Gerald Ford was committed enough to a conservative approach to pass muster with the Reagan wing of the party. Among the Democrats, a constant chorus heard in the North is whether Jimmy Carter is willing to bend enough in a liberal direction to satisfy the ideological wishes of the liberal wing.

On an overall basis, President Ford is as conservative as the country as a whole, while Jimmy Carter is considerably less conservative, less middle of the road and more liberal than the general population.

HIRING A PAINTER MAY BE CHEAPER THAN TREATING NECK AND BACK PAIN

Q. Doctor, I think I've really done something to myself. I decided to paint my ceilings and when I got to the last room, I developed a severe pain in my neck, have a headache and I think bursts in both shoulders. What's more, Dr. Lowell every time I raise my head back or bend it over I have a sharp excruciating pain in my low back. Could this painting have done all this to me? What should I do?

A. I think you "have really done something to yourself." In fact, without proper and immediate correctional treatment you may have set yourself up for many years of pain, misery and discomfort. To me, this is one of the most serious spine-nerve situations that can occur. And, before I go further, I want to emphasize the absolute necessity of early and immediate treatment before this condition sets up permanent and irreversible effects.

Q. What actually happened to me to cause this?

A. Your neck is a delicate supporting structure which must function without stabilizing bony supports. In its strength it is relatively weak since the 8-10 pounds of weight of the head becomes a constant threat to the continued stability of the neck. A chief function of the neck is to keep the head balanced over a central point in the low back (sacral foundation) and prolonged positions such as you have used in painting your ceiling disturbs this delicate balance and often ruins what structural support the muscles and ligaments produce, thus destroying stability and putting harmful stress of the spinal cord and nerves.

Q. How did this happen in my case?

A. As you elevate your neck and head to paint your ceilings the head is tilted backward and its weight is off-center. The neck then is called upon to do something it can't do very long. After a short period of time in this position, the muscles and ligaments become exhausted and SOMETHING IN THE NECK HAS TO GIVE! Usually the top (atlas) vertebra which is supposed to be parallel or nearly level to the floor goes up in front 20 or 30 degrees. This is because the weight of the head has shifted its center of gravity to the back of the atlas. The back head tilt position and the exhausted or sprained muscles and ligaments cause a severe stress to the spinal cord and nerves coming through its central canal and going to all parts of the body. When a person is hung, he dies very quickly because of an even more exaggerated position of the atlas slipped up and pinching the spinal cord. Most people with the atlas angle remaining 25-30 degrees or more become permanently disabled. So, I feel that this is what you have done to yourself and needless to say immediate Precision Chiropractic diagnosis and treatment are vital.

Opening party benefits League

A gala preview party Thursday benefitting Assistance League of Long Beach will precede the public opening Friday of new Buffums Marina Pacifica store.

The party, featuring buffet dinner and no-host bar, is planned from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. The doors of the waterfront store open to customers at 10 a.m. the next day.

Providing musical entertainment for preview guests will be Sunshine Express and the Frank Lester Trio. Magic Castle performers, Bruce Cervon, sleight of hand artist, and Ron Wilson, will present magic tricks throughout the evening.

Among prizes to be awarded are a seven-day cruise for two, a $750 women's wardrobe, a mink stroller, a Cuisinart Food Processor and a four piece Wallace silver tea set and waiter.

Tickets at $12.50 per person are available from Mrs. Joseph Smith, 600 Ultimo Ave., Long Beach 90814.

THE NEW Marina Pacifica store, which eventually will have a boat dock, is adjacent to a foot bridge from the Marina Pacifica residential complex. The store has 40,000 square feet inside on two levels, doubling the space and merchandise of the former Buffums Marina store.

Additions not in the former Marina store are a full service beauty studio, fine jewelry, furs, gourmet cookware, housewares, luggage, bedding and bath, foundations and children's clothing departments, plus a tennis shop.

Chaix and Johnson Associates did the interior design, which features exposed wooden beams, ceramic tile floors interspersed with brick, a sculptured chandelier on the upper level and mirrored and stained glass wall panels.

Manager of the new store is Kay Humfeld.

Pat's Pointers

Here's proof positive that fashion is a look, not a price. With your crochet hook and a few skeins of "Wintuk" sport yarn, you can whip up this stunning black and white tunic for a fraction of what it would cost ready-made. Side slits, flared cuffs and the built-in dickey make this the complete cover-up for your favorite pants and skirts. Directions are for making sizes small (6-8), medium (10-12) and large (14-16). To obtain directions for making the two-color tunic, send your request for Leaflet No. PC-8293 with 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, Dept. LBI, P.O. Box 17635, Charlotte, N.C. 28211. Pat's Guide to Interchangeable Yarns can be obtained by sending $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to the same address. Request booklet No. 1.

Big Band sounds come to Catalina

Harry James and his orchestra will play for dancing in the Avalon Casino on Catalina Island from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday at a benefit sponsored by the Avalon Municipal Hospital.

Tickets are $6.50 each and are available from P.O. Box 1563, Avalon 90704. Joseph Arno is chairman of the event.

Transportation to the island is available via Long Beach-Catalina Cruises.

Enrollment event set by ABWA

In keeping with the election year, "Campaign Caper" is theme for semi-annual enrollment event sponsored by American Business Women's Association.

Harbor Lights Charter Chapter will host its get-acquainted membership session Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Seal Beach home of Jessie Jean Irvin, 113 Stanford Lane, College Park West.

According to Shirley Coleman, chapter president, ABWA is an organization dedicated to helping women in business advance through education, increased competence and through upgrading of professional skills and attitudes.

Founded in 1949 in Kansas City, Mo., ABWA now has chapters throughout the United States and Puerto Rico with more than 83,000 members. Its main project is the awarding of scholarships to women students.

Prospective members bid to LWV meet

A "Know the League" meeting to introduce prospective members to Long Beach League of Women Voters is planned Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the home of Margaret Gansle, 260 San Remo Drive.

Membership in the non-partisan, political organization is open to all persons over 18 years of age. Further information may be obtained from Lynn Brandt.

AGSM cards

A luncheon and card party hosted by Long Beach Chapter, American Gold Star Mothers, is planned Friday noon in Recreation Hall at Gold Star Manor, Spring Street and Santa Fe Avenue. Cost is $1.50 per person.

DEAR ABBY

Nickname—many meanings

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: In reading about your 40th high school reunion, we were most interested in learning that your nickname is "Popo."

We lived for a while in Micronesia (a Pacific Island) where Truskee is spoken, and "popo" in Truskee means "pregnant."

We have a loyal and sensitive dog, which we appropriately named Popo. Just thought you would like to know about your namesake.

DIANE DEAR DIANE: Thanks. I have several other namesakes. Popo is short for Popocatepetel, a volcano in Mexico. And it's also the German word for that part of the anatomy on which one usually falls.

DEAR ABBY: My only grandchildren (a boy, 14, and a girl, 15) live in a distant state, and I always remember them handsomely at Christmastime.

Last March I received a letter from their mother (my daughter-in-law) that said, "Barby and Sonny have asked me to thank you for your fabulous Christmas gifts, and they're terribly ashamed that they never got around to thanking you themselves."

I replied to that letter as follows: "As far as I'm concerned, Barby and Sonny have not as yet acknowledged my Christmas gifts properly; furthermore, they are old enough to write their own thank-you notes, and it's high time they learned some manners."

Next thing I knew, I got a snippy letter from my daughter-in-law, saying, "If you're going to make such a big deal out of thank-you notes, please don't send the children any more presents."

Abby, you know perfectly well that I am not going to forget my grandchildren at Christmastime. Was I wrong to complain?

HURT NANA

DEAR HURT: Yes. And your daughter-in-law was also wrong to have written that snippy letter. What motivates your giving? Is it the pleasure of giving? Or the pleasure of being thanked?

There is no excuse for the rudeness your grandchildren showed, but if their lack of appreciation irritates you, you should tell THEM, not their mother.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 9 years old and I want a horse more than anything in this world! Dad said, "You can have a horse if you can pay for it, plus all the equipment and the upkeep."

The horse I want costs $150, but I don't have the money. I don't get an allowance, and I can't earn money doing chores for the neighbors because they say I'm too young and I might get hurt.

I can't earn any money doing chores around my own house because my folks say I live here and should do whatever I can for nothing.

HORSE-CRAZY IN INDIANA

DEAR HORSE-CRAZY: I'm afraid you will have to be patient until you are able to EARN the money — unless you can persuade your dad to lend it to you with the understanding that you will repay him when you become a wage earner.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours?

For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Cards offered

A public card party offering bridge, canasta and pinochle is planned Wednesday noon in the parish hall of St. Lucy Church, Santa Fe Avenue and 23rd Street, sponsored by the Altar Society. A $1.25 donation is asked.

The poor have the same basic pleasures as the rich, and the rich will always resent it.

In today's tricky slam, West was richer than he thought. Unfortunately for him, he was quick to squander his most important card and our well heeled declarer put another slam into his till.

West was not one to lead from kings and he chose a heart instead (a diamond lead would have been better; a club lead would have been fatal).

Dummy's nine was played and East covered with the 10, declarer winning the ace. How was declarer going to avoid the loss of a diamond and a club?

West's lead and East's emphatic play of the heart 10 promised little future for a heart finesse and if declarer established dummy's hearts via a ruff, there was no entry to dummy to run the good hearts, unless...

SO DECLARER carefully baited his hook and dangled it under West's nose. After winning the heart ace, he led a heart to dummy's king and ruffed a third heart with his spade 10. West overruffed in surprise, thinking that South had temporarily lost part of his senses.

Still shying from leading from a king, West exited with his last trump and declarer sprung the trap. He won the trump lead with his ace and entered dummy via a low trump to dummy's nine.

The rest of dummy's hearts were more than enough to take care of de-

Tough N.Y. drug law a failure, report says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new federal study has concluded that New York state's tough 1973 drug law put fewer people in prison in each of its first two years of operation than did the old, more lenient law.

The study by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration also said that tough mandatory penalties in the law, including up to life terms for the most serious drug offenses, did not prove a deterrent, and that the speed in which cases were handled in the courts did not improve.

NEW YORK CITY courts, under the new law, built up a backlog of cases that stopped growing only in the last quarter of 1975, the study said.

The new law was passed in 1973. The study, released Sunday, was for the years 1974 and 1975.

This year, partly in response to the trends cited in the report, the New York Legislature significantly weakened the law's restrictions on plea-bargaining and made it possible for most small-time heroin sellers to avoid the law's life-sentence provisions. There are no figures available on what effect those changes have had.

Under the more stringent provisions of the law, prison sentences were required for all drug felonies, except those involving marijuana. For many Class A felony convictions, most of which involve heroin, a life sentence was mandated.

Restrictions were placed on the amount of plea bargaining that was permitted, and drug offenses were reclassified by lowering the amount of drugs required to qualify a crime as a felony.

The LEAA report said that the 1973 law will be judged successful if the risk of punishment facing offenders increases, the number of offenders sentenced to prison increases and the speed with which cases are processed improves.

"During the first two years the new drug and sentencing laws were in effect, none of these key indicators of successful implementation have been evident," it said.

In 1973, under the old law, an estimated 1,560 defendants went to prison on conviction of drug charges. Under the new law, in 1974 the number sent to prison was less than 1,100 and in 1975 an estimated 1,433 were sentenced, the report said.

The report said that by the end of 1975 about $55 million had been spent on court-related resources, including more judges, to implement the law.

Still, the report said that, especially in New York City, it took a long time to process cases. This was partly the result of having more trials since plea bargaining was restricted, the study said.

others dropped out with minor injuries.

In holiday traffic, California was second in the nation in numbers of highway fatalities with 25, led by Texas with 29.

The National Safety Council reported that nationwide 313 persons had been killed by 11 p.m. Sunday, well ahead of minimum predictions to that hour in the holiday weekend. Last year, 407 traffic deaths occurred over Labor Day weekend.

ONLY ONE traffic fatality had been reported in Los Angeles and Orange counties by late Sunday.

It occurred Saturday when 23-year-old Luis Romero of Rosemead tried to jump into a car that was fleeing from La Vita Terrace and Wallace Avenue after it collided with another vehicle, officers said. Romero was pronounced dead at the scene.

A 41-year-old Los Angeles man thought to be a traffic fatality when he was killed on the Pasadena Freeway late Friday was instead the victim of a gunshot wound, police said Sunday.

Highway Patrol officers originally speculated that James Waer was crushed to death when his car bounded from the guard rail into the air, hit an embankment and landed upside down on the freeway. But an autopsy released late Sunday determined he had been shot.

In another incident, a highway patrol officer was injured when his motorcycle was hit by a car driven by an allegedly drunken driver.

OFFICER J. Tucker, 33, was treated at Huntington Memorial Hospital in Pasadena for a fractured right leg, a fractured left arm and multiple cuts.

Reginald Bendit, 27, of Altadena, was booked on suspicion of felony drunken driving in the accident. He was not injured.

The National Weather Service predicted variable cloudiness today throughout Southern California, with expected high and low temperatures of 78 and 68 at Long Beach. Desert highs were expected to range from 90 at Apple Valley to 102 at Palm Springs, with highs in the 70s in the mountains.

Advocates of "clothing-optional" beaches will gather at Venice Beach today for the third day of "Nude Beach Weekend." A group called Beachfront U.S.A. will circulate petitions in support of nude bathing in a designated area near Pirates Cove in Malibu.

Bus strike starting to take toll on noncommuters, too

By BRAD ALTMAN Staff Writer

The Southern California Rapid Transit District strike enters its third week today with no end in sight, and the walkout by bus drivers and mechanics is beginning to take its toll on the Southland's 7 million residents.

In monetary terms, the total losses are almost impossible to estimate. Commuters spend money on alternative forms of transportation and employees are laid off at restaurants and retail stores that depend heavily on public transit for their customers.

AT ONE downtown Los Angeles department store, sales have dropped 20 per cent since the strike began despite the back-to-school season; by next week the store's losses could total $2 million to $3 million, an economist estimated.

The cost of the stalemate in social terms cannot be measured, either. No price tag can be put on the inconvenience to those who depend on public transportation for a way to get to jobs, stores and medical services. Nor can it be known how many health problems can be directly related to air pollution from heavier freeway traffic.

When the strike finally ends, it may take a long time for things to get back to normal. People change their routines during strikes and do not always return to their old habits at the end of a walkout.

Walt Thompson, RTD spokesman, said Sunday it will take "at least two days" to get the district's 2,400 buses running again when the strike is over. Currently, nonunion supervisory personnel are handling routine bus maintenance, such as charging batteries and running engines, he said.

Thompson said the 11-member RTD board of directors is standing by its original pre-strike offer of a 19.5 per cent wage and fringe benefits increase for drivers and 18.24 per cent for mechanics and maintenance workers.

There were no new developments in the strike over the Labor Day weekend, Thompson added. Members of the Amalgamated Transit Union (ATU), representing almost 1,100 RTD mechanics and maintenance personnel, voted Friday to accept a compromise 21 per cent package hammered out earlier in the week at talks also attended by county supervisors and the state conciliator.

THE RTD BOARD will meet to "discuss this issue" Wednesday.

"I won't speculate what the board will do," Thompson said, "but it was misleading for the ATU to submit the 21 per cent figure to its membership for a vote under those conditions when the RTD hasn't even offered that figure."

Little money separates the unions and management. Union officials estimate it amounts to only $200 a year for each of the district's 5,000 drivers, members of the United Transportation Union.

Americans are on the move, and process can be perilous

Associated Press

The semiannual migration of Americans from one city to another is in full swing as families try to get settled in new homes before the start of the school year.

The Interstate Commerce Commission says there were more than 1.2 million household moves last year. There are no specifics on how much the relocations cost, but a commission spokesman estimated the total at a little over $1 billion, or about $830 for each move.

Ray Atherton, chief of the ICC's Household Goods Branch, said moving is a highly seasonal business, with spring and fall booms timed to the closing and opening of school.

Atherton said the commission receives about 1,000 complaints a month on moving troubles. The most common problem is loss and damage. He said the number of complaints has remained steady over recent years, although the number of shipments has increased.

For the consumer, moving can be an expensive proposition, particularly over long distances.

Interstate movers, licensed by the ICC, base charges on weight and distance. There is usually a given rate per 100 pounds that increases with distance. While local truckers often charge by the hour, time is not a price factor in most long-distance moves.

A cross-country move from New York to Los Angeles for a three-bedroom house with about 7,500 pounds of furniture will probably cost at least $2,500 to $3,000, Atherton said.

A MAJOR decision for most people is whether to pack their household goods themselves or let the movers do it. "You can save considerable money by doing it yourself," Atherton said, adding that having the movers pack can add $500 or more to the price of an average move.

If you do your own packing, Atherton explained, it is up to you to prove negligence by the company if something is damaged. If the movers pack, the burden of proof is on the company.

Packing your own possessions takes time. Atherton said that anyone who wants to do his own packing had better set aside every evening for a week or so. Some people, however, actually do a better job of packing than professional movers. "I've moved three times and I always do my own packing," Atherton said. "I've never had a teacup broken."

Interstate movers have a basic liability of 60 cents per pound. That means that you'll get only 60 cents if a one-pound vase is broken — even if the vase is expensive crystal. You can purchase additional coverage, paying $5 for every extra $1,000 worth of liability protection.

There are some things that you should never trust to the movers; Atherton said, citing jewelry, coin or stamp collections and personal papers.

In accordance with ICC regulations, some 2,500 household moving companies filed reports on their performance in 1975 — including information on everything from the number of shipments handled to the percentage of delayed deliveries.

THE ICC requires each moving company that operates on an interstate basis to give a copy of its performance report to prospective customers, giving consumers a chance to compare several firms.

"KNOW YOUR PORT SERIES"; NUMBER FIVE

Where do cargos come from?

You may be surprised when you read the "top ten" list below. Among the leaders in cargo tonnage of foreign origin are a few names you might not expect.

With 67 percent of total Port of Long Beach commerce being of a foreign nature, the Port divides the outside world into five major foreign trade regions.

The largest share of activity belongs to a combination region called the "Pacific Basin"—which includes all countries bordering the Pacific Ocean, with the exception of the USSR which is included in Europe.

Here's how the 19.8 million tons of foreign cargo—both inbound and outbound—divided up by geographic area last year:

Far East .....	10.2
Europe .....	2.9
Middle East .....	2.2
Latin America .....	2.1
Africa .....	1.9
Canada .....	.5

The top ten foreign trade customers of the Port by total tonnage:

Japan .....	4,280,340
Indonesia .....	2,328,431
Iran .....	1,628,422
Netherlands .....	1,253,401
Ecuador .....	1,046,399
Hong Kong .....	968,283
Korea .....	814,066
Republic of China .....	735,659
Mexico .....	573,207
Nigeria .....	525,877

European and Middle Eastern trade has claimed a significantly larger share of the totals in recent years and both now have passed South America in tonnage. The current apportionment among regions and nations is not expected to change significantly until China and Russia enter the trade market more vigorously.

Another 33 percent of your Port's commerce is classed as either "coastwise" or "intercoastal" cargo. All West Coast ports are our "coastwise" customers. U.S. ports on other coasts—such as New York, Norfolk, Houston, New Orleans, Tampa—are classed as "intercoastal" customers, as well as such offshore domestic ports as Hawaii, Guam and Alaska.

Let's not overlook the immediate "neighborhood." The next largest area of Port cargo market activity is the 14 southernmost counties of California, an area of 78,885 square miles. For every one of the 13.9 million residents in this region, the Port last year handled over two tons of cargo.

Add in the third market segment—the six adjacent western states—and altogether the total Port market area involves 26 million Western Americans. For every resident of the West the Port of Long Beach moved over one ton of cargo last year.

The Port has its work cut out for it. As the foreign commerce leader of the West, your Port of Long Beach will continue to grow to meet the demands of worldwide cargo transportation.

were driven to the terminal in the first busload of released hostages, then transferred to a police car, which sped off toward Nicosia, 30 miles away. A Libyan embassy official was in the car.

Airport officers said it was understood the hijackers would receive safe passage from Cyprus to a country of their choice.

The Israelis had refused to accept any communication from the hijackers and blocked the runways of Ben-Gurion Airport in Tel Aviv with vehicles to keep the plane from landing there. Israel has a policy of refusing demands by hijackers and terrorists.

The Israeli prisoners listed by the Arabs included Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capudji, convicted of smuggling arms into Israel, and Japanese Red Army terrorist Kozo Okamoto, who took part in the 1972 Lod Airport massacre in which 26 people died. The other six all had Arab names.

Most of the passengers were Dutch tourists returning from vacations in Spain and France, the airline said. There were two Americans, 13 Spaniards, five French, two Moroccans, two Indonesians, a West German, a Belgian, two Finns and three Arabs on the passenger list.

The KLM plane was taken over 20 minutes

after it left Nice, France, on a flight to Amsterdam. It flew to Tunisia, where it was refueled. It then flew the 1,300 miles here.

The Israeli army said the hijacked jet flew to within 100 miles of Tel Aviv, where two jet interceptors rose to meet it. The hijackers turned back to Cyprus.

Before landing here the second time, the Arabs radioed detailed instructions on the release of the Israeli prisoners. They said the eight must be put aboard a plane out of Israel and a prearranged code word transmitted by representatives of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) and relayed to the hijackers.

organic compounds in the red Utopia soil. Those essential compounds seem to be the "missing link" in Viking 1's search for life. Several of Viking 1's biology experiments have suggested the presence of life, but no organics have actually been found.

The Utopia region was chosen for its relatively smooth surface and because its climate was considered more favorable for finding life, the basic purpose of the Viking missions. Scientists say the arid Chryse Basin where Viking 1 rests may be partly to blame for the craft's inconclusive probes for life. Utopia, 4,600 miles away, is moister and theoretically more hospitable for life.

If all Viking 2's equipment works properly, scoopsful of moist soil will be deposited in correct amounts inside a miniature laboratory where various tests will be performed to find any living as well as nonliving properties of Mars.

Even in the dry, rocky Chryse Basin, Viking 1's experiments have not ruled out life. A series of experiments have been repeated there and re-checked. Radioactive tracers injected into the soil still show up in gases emitted by the sample when it is heated, indicating at least the possibility of life.

Despite the major differences scientists hope to find in Utopia, the flat, rocky plain appeared in photographs very much like Viking 1's home base.

Seniors put love in life of children 'Grandparents' get extra income, too

By KRIS SHERMAN Staff Writer

Rita Quick, Benny Fox and Twyla Priester are all senior citizens living on fixed incomes. But the three of them, plus about 90 colleagues, have an unusual source of income that sets them apart from other seniors.

They get paid for being grandparents.

And in the bargain, they get a special satisfaction and renewed purpose in life from spending 20 hours each week with mentally, emotionally and physically handicapped children at Fairview State Hospital in Costa Mesa.

All belong to the hospital's federally funded Foster Grandparent Program, a plan designed to bolster the income of senior citizens while providing one-to-one companionship for some of the facility's patients.

The foster grandparents, who must be at least 60 years old, in good health and have an income of less than $304 per month, work with their charges four hours a day, five days a week.

THEY EARN $1.60 an hour, tax free, and are given a free lunch each day and allotted $1.75 a day for transportation.

In addition, they receive paid holidays, insurance under Workmen's Compensation for work-connected injuries or illness, sick leave of up to one day a month, vacation after one year of employment and an annual physical examination, according to program administrator Kathi Otto.

Mrs. Otto, a music therapist who became administrator of the four-year-old program about five months ago, said she believes the main merit of the plan lies in its ability to bring otherwise lonely seniors in contact with children who desperately need individual attention.

"The children (who range in age from 1 to 21 years) get very good care here," she said, "but there's just no way, when you have 16 or 18 kids to a ward, that they can give a lot of individual attention."

"But with the Foster Grandparent Program, the kids are taken on walks around the grounds, to the canteen for treats, to the farm to play with the animals or to the pool."

SHE SAID each grandparent is assigned to two children, working with one for two hours each morning and the other for two hours each afternoon.

Mrs. Otto added that the grandparents also provide the children, who otherwise wouldn't have the opportunity, a chance to go on field trips to Southland amusement parks, picnics and bowling alleys.

At the hospital, the grandparents can easily be spotted by their distinctive blue smocks as they push their charges around in their wheelchairs, ride the facility's "Jolly Trolley" or sit in the shade enjoying an Indian Summer day.

Their status may be adoptive, but an eavesdropper would easily mistake them for natural grandparents.

"Look at this child. Just look at her," Rita Quick said to a passerby, tilting the face of 12-year-old Lisa upward. "Isn't she beautiful? She has personality plus!"

Mrs. Quick, a 72-year-old Newport Beach resident, later explained that she joined the Foster Grandparent Program soon after her husband died three years ago.

"I came out here, and it was real therapy for me," said the white-haired Mrs. Quick, who has four natural grandchildren.

She said one of her foster grandchildren, 11-year-old Tracy, came to Fairview after an accident. "She was doubled up in a prenatal position, and she wouldn't respond to anyone," Mrs. Quick said.

"But now she's walking and attending a special school—she's blind—for two hours a day. I'm so grateful. I really feel that I've made some progress with her."

As she spoke, another patient walked by, noticed her blue coat and said with a smile, "Hi, Grandma." The boy, who wasn't one of Mrs. Quick's charges, is one of several patients who benefit from the smiles and attention of the foster grandparents, according to Mrs. Otto.

"It's going to be three years pretty soon since I've been in the program," said Benny Fox, a former circus aerialist who now lives in Anaheim. "This—working with these kids—is the happiest moment of my old age," added Fox. "It's wonderful, just wonderful."

Esther Dessardo, a 71-year-old Anaheim resident, agreed with Fox.

"I've been in the program about six months," she said. "I figured it was about time for me to give up my job as a nurse's aide—I was one for 17 years—and do something else. This is it, and I love it."

My two grandchildren are both in wheelchairs, so they don't run me ragged," she added. "I do get a great deal of enjoyment loving them and letting them know I'm around. They don't recognize me by sight, but they both know my voice. It's a very nice way of not staying at home being bored."

They want to keep 'schoolgirl figures'

Saidi Dancers gyrate for the fun of it

Story and Photos By BOB GEIVET

"Saidi" means 'Hello' in Arabic, and 18 lovely costumed dancers can welcome you to the "world of the Seven Veils" and Ali's 1,000 Nights."

So reads the introduction to the Saidi Dancers, who, true to claim, are lovely.

They live in Orange County, Long Beach and environs, and they perform anywhere—for the love of it, because they're all volunteers and none is paid.

The young women of Saidi Dancers are so dedicated that they provide their own costumes. And for the variety of dances they do—Arabic and other ethnic interpretations along with Polynesian love routines and American jazz—that's considerable.

AS AN organization, however, there is a charge for performances, except for charity affairs. Usually, the charge is nominal, and all profits are used for material for costumes.

Then, as occasion demands, the women have sewing sessions to make their new outfits. And it seems to them that they're constantly replacing their costumes, because there's little strength in the sheer materials they use.

The young women started two years ago to exercise and dance "to keep our schoolgirl figures,"

Lakewood faces employe strike

By HAL LOWE Staff Writer

The City of Lakewood will face its first strike by city employes in its 22-year history when 99 members of Service Employees International Union Local 680 start picketing city hall at 6:15 a.m. Tuesday.

The Lakewood bargaining unit of the union covers employes in parks and recreation, the water department, tree trimming and building inspection. They are seeking a flat $60-a-month salary increase.

John Adams, union regional manager, said last week that the object of the picketing was to get city officials to return to the bargaining table. "But," Adams said, "city officials tell us it's a closed matter."

Two executive sessions of the City Council were scheduled for last Thursday and Friday to seek a solution to the labor problems, but both were canceled when not enough council members could be contacted for a meeting. A city hall source said many of the council members were away for the long holiday weekend.

In a statement issued over the weekend, City Administrator Howard Chambers, who has been negotiating for the city, gave the city's position in the dispute.

"Over a period of approximately three months, city representatives have been meeting with the union. On Aug. 17, a failure to agree on employe salary increases resulted in an impasse being declared. The city's procedure for the resolution of impasse was then implemented," the statement said.

"The matter was heard by the City Council at its meeting on Aug. 24 and the council directed that a series of changes and additions be made in the city's compensation program. These included eight items agreed to by the union, plus salary increases ranging from a minimum of 3 per cent to 10.5 per cent for employes represented in the union.

Chambers said, "At this point, the union continues to demand that all employes receive a $60-a-month salary increase. The strike presumably is being called to bring attention to this item."

"The city considers the strike an illegal act and reserves the right to take appropriate action. However, if a strike does take place, arrangements have been made for a continuation of city services. All city offices will remain open," Chambers said.

In rejecting the union proposal at its Aug. 24 meeting, the City Council estimated that a $60 increase would mean a city property tax boost of 4 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Water agency may appeal land value

Directors of the Orange County Water District may appeal a Santa Ana Superior Court jury's finding that a 58-acre parcel of the old Burris Sand Pit at Anaheim is worth $318,715, an amount far larger than the district anticipated during condemnation actions.

Three parcels were involved in a court battle over the price of the land, which the water district took by eminent domain for use as a water-sinking pit and reservoir for surplus flow.

The 115-acre sand pit was shut down during the heavy storms of 1969, when the Santa Ana River threatened to overflow its banks at the Burris property, situated at a bend of the river between South Street and Ball Road.

Subsequently, negotiations began for acquisition of the long-closed sand pit. Various uses have been considered, including a recreational park, a lake and as a dump ground that could later be improved for public use.

Owners of the land are La Verne Bassie, Nanette Porter and Bessie Brooks, and they valued it at $12,500 to $15,000 per acre. The water district said it was worth $1,500 to $5,000 per-acre.

The district had offered $225,000 for the land and the owners rejected the price. The district then condemned it, agreeing to let the court determine the price.

WENDY MORRIS, STANDING, AND PAM ALBRIGHT

LETTER FROM MAC MALCOLM EPLEY

FORT BIDWELL—Readers accustomed to the bustle down yonder sometimes ask me how I spend my time up here in the back country.

My answer is that it's very easy to spend a lot of time here. In fact, it's not hard to spend all the time.

This little incident may illustrate:

Harry Hollins, who ranched here until about six months ago and then left for the south, came back the other day to look after his interests. I was sitting on the front porch of the store on a simply magnificent afternoon, observing whatever was going on, which wasn't much. The rancher came up in a pickup.

"Mac," said Hollins, "you haven't gotten very far. I'm sure you were sitting right there the last time I saw you in the spring."

ON THE same day, Eugene Meyer, recently retired from the postal service at Long Beach, came by with a Lakeview friend. We sat down in the shady front yard.

Something came up about hobbies and retirement.

I observed that one hobby is simply doing nothing. After 50 years of chasing news and meeting deadlines, I averred, I found that particular new hobby very rewarding.

If this sounds frightening or disgusting, let me say that the impression I've given may be a little exaggerated, just for fun.

I do feed our dogs, look after and sometimes ride our horses, switch irrigation water in the meadows, mow the lawn, putter a little around the place, go to town on various errands.

I'VE DONE enough civic things that I'm slated as upcoming president of the Surprise Valley Rotary Club, which is quite something for a fellow who has been president of two Kiwanis clubs (downtown Long Beach and Klamath Falls).

Also, on some evenings, I add to the onerous chores of the day by playing a little cards—a game in which deceit and stealing are moral but somewhat exhausting. It takes something out of one to abandon, for a few hours, the principles he has lived by.

To offset that, I meticulously handle the cash as treasurer of both the church and the volunteer fire department.

And of course, I knock out this column once a week. For the most part, that's pure enjoyment.

WHILE I was sitting in front of the store that day, a strange thing happened.

A van came up and out stepped a fellow named

Statham, who is the Republican nominee for state assemblyman in our district.

He's the only candidate for state office I've seen at Ft. Bidwell since coming up here five years ago. We have about 100 voters and only a mighty thorough campaigner would drive the long distance to our corner to dig for the few votes available.

Furthermore, the Assembly district is immense, covering most of Northern California above the Sacramento valley. Statham lives at Chico, as does his Democratic opponent, a woman.

Chico is a long way from here. In area, the Assembly district is larger than many states, with extreme variations in economic interests, geography, etc. Earl Warren's one-man-one-vote thing did that.

If Statham's visit here is an indication of the kind of vote drive he'll make, he's going to put a lot of mileage behind that van.

And I intend to vote for him.

BY THE WAY, WHEN ARE FORD AND CARTER SUPPOSED TO HAVE THIS DEBATE?

A lesson from the DMZ

The author is a South Korean who is studying at Long Beach State University for a master's degree in criminal justice. He previously obtained a law degree in Seoul. — The Editor

By SUNG-HWAN OH

First of all, I and all South Koreans really regret the recent loss of the two U.S. military officers in the DMZ. At the same time, I am sorry for the families of the two officers killed and for the Americans and American government. I would like to mention the real implications of the incident.

There are several conclusions to be drawn from the incident and about the situation in South Korea and North Korea today. They include: (1) to recognize once more the belligerent and brute character of Communist North Korea in the process of achieving their Communist goals, such as in Cambodia and Vietnam; (2) to consider once more not losing the support of the United States to her allies, and (3) to abstain from unrealistic prejudice toward South Korea, which produces the so-called "gradual withdrawal of American military forces from South Korea."

FOR COMMUNISTS everywhere, including not only North Korea, "ends justify means." I and all South Koreans already have many proofs of their inhumane means for achieving their Communist ends; for example, committing a large-scale massacre of many innocent South Koreans during the Korean War (1950-1953). With the intent of infiltrating South Korea, they also killed people by wielding any kind of deadly weapon such as hoes, scythes, stones, iron hammers, bamboo or metal pikes, and axes, and killed even by tearing a person's body to pieces. Such unforgettable and horrible incidents by the North Korean Communists during the Korean War, beyond the human imagination or understanding, still clearly exist in the minds of all South Koreans and the American people who served their military duty during the war.

In order to keep allied countries' trust in America's strong authority, which is gradually declining, there should be no more mistakes of America's foreign policies (e.g., in such countries as Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos), formed by some American politicians who are self-styled as progressive and liberal, aiming at a certain political issue for only their own group or political party rather than for the entire visible and invisible long-term interests of the United States of America.

JUDGING FROM the other recent incidents of willful murders or disturbances committed by the North Korea Communists in the DMZ of Korea, there is North Korea's willful attempt to test "how the United States of America

No one can 'steal' the love of another

While Sydney Harris is vacationing, we are reprinting selected columns. — The Editor

A reader in Florida, apparently bruised by some personal experience, writes in to complain, "If I

steal a nickel's worth of merchandise, I am a thief and punished; but if I steal the love of another's wife, I am free."

This is a prevalent misconception in many people's minds that love, like merchandise, can be "stolen." Numerous states, in fact, have enacted laws allowing damages for "alienation of affections."

BUT LOVE is not a commodity; the real thing cannot be bought, sold, traded or stolen. It is an act of the will, a turning of the emotions, a change in the climate of the personality.

When a husband or wife is "stolen" by another person, that husband or wife was already ripe for the stealing, was already predisposed toward a new partner. The "love-bandit" was only taking what was waiting to be taken, what wanted to be taken.

We tend to treat persons like goods. We even speak of children "belonging" to their parents. But nobody "belongs" to anyone else. Each person belongs to himself, and if their parents do not treat them properly, the state has a right to remove them from their parents' trusteeship.

Most of us, when young, had the experience of a sweetheart being taken from us by somebody more attractive and more appealing. At the time, we may have resented this intruder — but as we grew older, we recognized that the sweetheart had never been ours to begin with. It was not the intruder that "caused" the break, but the lack of a real relationship.

On the surface, many marriages seem to break up because of a "third party." This is, however, a psychological illusion. The other woman or the other man merely serves as a pretext for dissolving a marriage that had already lost its essential integrity.

NOTHING IS MORE futile and more self-defeating than the bitterness of spurned love, the vengeful feeling that someone else has "come between" oneself and a beloved. This is always a distortion of reality, for people are not the captives or victims of others — they are free agents, working out their own destinies for good or for ill.

But the rejected lover or mate cannot afford to believe that his beloved has freely turned away from him — and so he ascribes sinister or magical properties to the interloper. He calls him a hypnotist or a thief or a home-breaker. In the vast majority of cases, however, when a home is broken, the breaking has begun long before any "third party" has appeared on the scene.

Finally, I and all South Koreans really wish some Americans would abstain from the unrealistic attitude toward South Korea. Those who do not know well the real situations between South and North Korea may insist on gradual withdrawal of American military forces from the so-called authoritarian country of South Korea, but this would most likely produce another invasion by the North Koreans. North Korea has been concentrating only on preparation of war while South Korea's concentration has been on national economic development through the revolutionary new community movement (Sae-Ma-Eul Movement).

George Robeson Can he plan a career of this?

THERE ARE BORN LOSERS, everybody knows that. Nearly everybody has met at least one in a lifetime. I had indirect contact with such a loser the other night.

I didn't meet him, but the evidence of his arrival and departure was clear when I visited my parked car. He had visited it, too, and a length of fine quality garden hose was drooping from the car's gas tank. The other end was in a trash can, a large green plastic bucket obviously borrowed from someplace down the street.

One end of the hose, the one inside the tank, smelled of gasoline. The end inside the bucket did not. Incidentally, the end inside the bucket (the sucking end) was fitted with a large brass attachment, which is unusually awkward for siphoning gas.

Several things went wrong with the rascal's plot:

IN THE FIRST PLACE, I had forgotten to get gasoline the day before, and there was enough in my tank to fill a large cigarette lighter and possibly get me to the station two blocks away.

In the second place, the thief either was scared away by an approaching car or pedestrian, or simply became discouraged after running more than four feet of hose into my tank and getting only a mouthful of brass instead of gas.

And so he lost his hose. So he couldn't go on to some other car that night.

And in the third place, had he gotten gas from my tank, it would have done him no good. The trash bucket he swiped for the job has a hole in the bottom, about four inches in diameter. All he would have gotten would be a pair of flammable shoes, if he wore shoes. If not, he could have contracted the dread disease, flaming feet.

Some guys just aren't cut out for a life of crime. I predict that, one day, this guy will be caught stealing a TV set from his own house. Hauled off to the cop-shop, he will attempt to escape by breaking away from his captors and rushing into the nearest jail cell, slamming the door behind him.

Then all night, he'll sit on the iron and wonder why things go so poorly for him. If I'm ever a stick-up victim, I hope he's the heister. I'll say, "Hey, I've never seen a pistol like that before," and he'll hand it to me.

ON BROADWAY, snuggled surprisingly between the Bixby Park Cleaners and an apartment house, is a sort of Mexican jungle. People pass it every day and don't notice it, because it's out of context in a primarily business district in the 1800 block.

It is a garden plot of cactus, tall, slim desert-born trees and other flora common to Mexico and parts of the Southwest United States. One type of huge-leaved desert plant is called Agavi, from which tequila is made.

Now don't go running down there with the idea of making some home-brewed cactus juice. The big garden (about 50 feet by 60 feet) is watched over off and on by residents of the apartment house next door.

This strange "other world" on a street of businesses and bars is laced with little paths that allow the passerby to cruise on foot for a few moments and pretend he's someplace else. I've done it several times.

And with the help of Edith Means of the cleaning shop next door and Jim Petrosky of the antique shop east of Edith, I tracked down the owner of the property. He's Art Haggis of 1012 Emerald Bay, Laguna Beach. He owns much of the property on that street, and the garden is the only plot that doesn't bring in an income. But he's sentimental about it. He likes growing things.

It was planted some 20 years ago, or perhaps a bit more recently, nobody recalls for sure, by one of the tenants in the apartment building. The planter is dead now. A few other tenants added to the project through the years. Many of those people have moved away, others are too old to put much work into the project.

BUT THE DESERT takes care of its own life, and so there is a place on a busy business street that is, fortunately for passers-by, out of place. I'd like to see some more out-of-place places like that one.

Inoculation problems

That proposal to inoculate the entire U.S. population against the swine influenza is a "bold undertaking," comments an editorial in the British Medical Journal.

A lot could go wrong. For one thing, there could be a measurable number of severe allergic side effects "which would not be balanced by tangible benefit."

And a swine flu pandemic, if it does come, may not do so this year. A population given a single dose of vaccine in the autumn of 1976 could lose much of its protection by the winter of 1977-78, and it might then be hard to persuade people to accept another injection when the first turned out not to have been necessary.

Also, there could be public loss of faith in influenza vaccine, which might extend to other vaccines.

The editorial points out that previous pandemics have erupted in countries in the Southern Hemisphere and the Far East before Europe and North America.

In addition, studies to date show that the swine flu virus is less virulent than most Type A influenza viruses. The editorial puts it this way: "It has not so far shown unusual virulence for man."

Although conditions in recruit camps favor epidemic spread, the swine flu outbreak in the United States (at a camp) lasted only about five weeks. Since then it has disappeared.

Drug for endometriosis

A new drug for the treatment of endometriosis, a gynecological disorder, has been approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

The compound is danazol, tradenamed Danocrine. Endometriosis affects mainly the pelvic region. It may be characterized by pelvic pain, abnormal uterine bleeding, painful menstruation and a feeling of pressure within the pelvic cavity. Sterility may also be present.

Danazol is at present indicated only for patients who cannot tolerate other drug therapy or in whom other drugs are not indicated. It is not for use when surgery alone is considered the treatment of choice.

Details appear in Current Prescribing, a periodical for physicians.

For ingrown toenails

A way to prevent ingrown toenails is described by a Texas doctor.

The method: Insert a thin roll of cotton under the ingrowing area of the nail.

The difficult part is getting the cotton in place.

Dr. Peter S. Herman of El Paso suggests the following procedure: Slide a short length of dental floss under the corner of the nail. Elevate the nail edge by gentle traction with the floss. Then slip in the cotton pledget.

The report appears in Consultant, a periodical for doctors.

Bunk beds hazardous

Products often regarded as harmless may sometimes be hazardous, notes the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission.

Example: the bunk bed.

Last year, according to a new report, an estimated 13,500 bunk bed-related injuries were treated in hospital emergency rooms. Children under 15 sustained nearly 87 per cent of these injuries.

THE CHANGES in South Korea in the past ten years have been dramatic. "When I came here seven years ago," a Western businessman in Seoul said, "there were very few big modern buildings and virtually no decent roads into the countryside. . . . Today, the center of Seoul doesn't look so very different from Tokyo in Japan" (quoted from the Sunday Mail, Singapore, February 17, 1974).

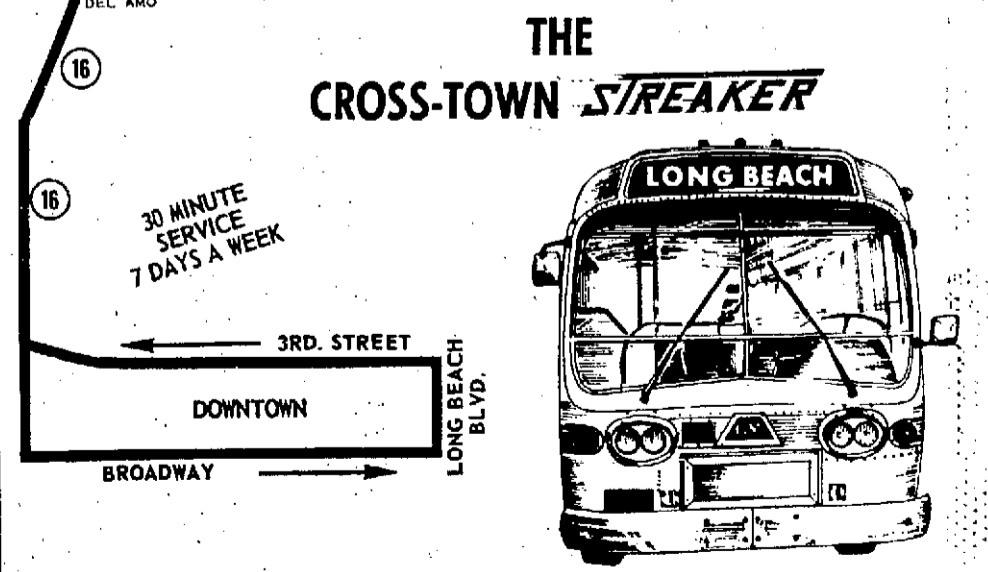

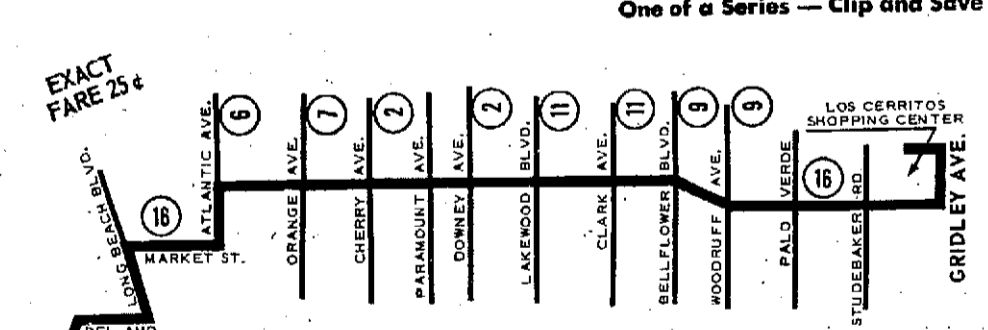

All South Koreans want only to coexist with the North Koreans until the peaceful reunification of South and North Korea will be realized. Thus, the South Koreans will continue to make efforts with sincerity and patience to secure concrete results from the South-North dialogue based on the spirit of the South-North Joint Communiqué on July 4, 1972, which was initiated by South Korea's Red Cross Talks with North Korea.

IN ADDITION to the above mentioned implications of the recent DMZ killings, it is necessary for people who are under the constitutional democratic governments of the world to understand that: (1) the North Korean Communists' normal means for certain ends are usually based on belligerence and brutality; (2) some American politicians who tend to associate the South Korean situation with the Vietnam experience should not be misled by propaganda, but must strongly and continually uphold the allied countries' trust in the United States of America, and (3) the premature misjudgment in formulation of America's foreign policy (the so-called gradual withdrawal of American military forces from South Korea) should be withheld until such a time when more satisfactory circumstances between South and North Korea will emerge because this kind of misjudgment would weaken the United States' position in the Far East, especially in the Korean Peninsula.

Unfortunately, the commitment and moral responsibility toward the struggling people of South Korea have not been shared by some leaders in the U.S. South Korea's successful resistance to North Korea requires more accurate understanding of the South Korean situation by Americans and responsible policy by their leaders.

B. Unser 'survives' slow Cal 500

By ALLEN WOLFE
Staff Writer

When he left the All-American Racers team last year in what was termed a "conflict of interest" with car owner Dan Gurney, many believed it meant the end of Bobby Unser as a competitive factor in United States Auto Club championship racing.

But the 42-year-old Albuquerque charger silenced the detractors Sunday in the only way he could, winning the California 500 for the second time in three years by a 2.6-second margin over defending Indianapolis 500 champion Johnny Rutherford.

But Bobby U. not so much won the race as he survived it.

Ever since it was built in 1970, the Ontario Motor Speedway had been lionized as one of the safest on the circuit for its wide pit entrance, sweeping aprons in the turns and the fact that it was a "three groove" track. It has not lived up to the image.

Three separate accidents—one a spectacular 150 mph end-over-end flip involving rookie Danny Ongais—plus numerous incidents of oil spillage and stalled vehicles forced starter Shim Malone to display the yellow caution flag for 49 laps, or one lap short of one-fourth the race.

Thirty-seven of the first 90 laps were run under the caution flag, reducing the race average at that juncture to a paltry 124.533 mph. It was then that the somewhat disappointing crowd of 52,466 began to wonder if they had paid to see a destruction derby or the 10th stop on this year's USAC championship trail.

Then, just as dramatically, the race turned into a RACE and ultimately emerged as one of the most competitive in the event's history, as evidenced by 19 lead changes among seven drivers. Although front-row starters A.J. Foyt and Tom Sneva led briefly early in the going, both were sidelined before the midway point in the race.

Racer driven by Danny Ongais slides upside down after flipping during Sunday's California 500.

—AP Wirephoto

Foyt, who captured the pole at 190.416 mph, led the first 13 laps but then dropped off the pace and was sidelined with no oil pressure in his Coyote after 77 laps. Sneva was never really a factor. He led laps 14 and 15 and was the eighth man to leave the race, succumbing to ignition failure after only 60 laps.

With the two "rabbits" out of the running, that left it to a quartet of veterans to fight it out—the Sin-mast Wildcat twosome of Wally Dallenbach and Gordon Johncock plus Rutherford and Bobby U.

From lap 58 on, the foursome was never separated by more than half a lap and they exchanged the lead between them 13 times.

Bobby U., who admitted after the race that "I didn't think the engine could last 500 miles," appeared to run stronger in his Bob Fletcher-sponsored Eagle-Offenhauser as the race progressed, out-running both Johncock and Rutherford.

The two-time Indy 500 winner took the lead for good on lap 178

when both Rutherford and Johncock pitted for fuel and tires. Three laps later, Unser pitted for 13.8 seconds and was able to maintain a lead of 10 car lengths over Rutherford exiting the pits.

Bobby then drew out to a 3-second lead and appeared to have the victory sewn up when an unthinking fan in the grandstands threw a beer can onto the racing surface near turn 4, bringing out the ninth and final yellow caution flag on the 194th lap, six shy of the checkered flag.

According to USAC rules, cars are allowed to "bunch up" and Rutherford tucked his orange Hy-Gain McLaren right up to the tail

Rau blanks Astros

Cy Young duel: Sutton vs. Jones

Staff Writer

HOUSTON — If Doug Rau had had a little better luck this season — and a few more runs — the Dodgers might have two candidates for the Cy Young Award instead of only one, Don Sutton.

Rau hurled a splendid three-hit, 4-0 shutout over the Houston Astros Sunday in the Astrodome for his 14th victory and he could easily have five more.

"I'm pitching the best I've ever pitched," Rau said following his fourth successive victory, a string which followed four losses in which the Dodgers scored just one run behind him.

Reggie Smith, with a bases-empty homer and a run-scoring triple, provided all the offense Rau needed for his third shutout of the year as well as the Dodgers' 10th win in their last 12 games to stay eight games back of Cincinnati.

Afterward Smith proclaimed: "This two-game series in San Diego (tonight and Tuesday night) is very, very crucial. I know every game is important but it's more important that we do well against San Diego because the Padres have done the job on us this year."

Dodgers of day

DOUG RAU hurled three-hit shutout and REGGIE SMITH homered and tripled in 4-0 victory over Astros.

The Dodgers, 27-35 against the National League West, have won only four of 13 games against the Padres.

Tonight, though, it's obvious the Padres are placing a good deal more importance on the Cy Young Award than they are the Dodgers.

They're starting Randy Jones, their candidate for the Cy Young, and they're starting him with only two days rest for one reason — national television (Channel 7, 5:40 p.m.), which means exposure.

Jones won 16 of his first 20 decisions — three of them against the Dodgers — but since the All-Star break has won but four of 11 and now stands at 20-11. The last time he worked with only two days rest he failed to last four innings.

The whole thing could backfire for the Pads.

Nicklaus' 'bad year': $261,769

World Series victory credited to hot putter

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, who says it hasn't been a very good season, salvaged some satisfaction with a two-under-par 68 and a convincing, four-stroke victory Sunday in the new, enlarged, enriched World Series of Golf.

"I never count it a good year if I don't win one of the majors (the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and PGA)," Nicklaus said, then smiled.

"I didn't win one of those so it's not a good season from that standpoint. But if you can't win a major, it'd be nice to be the leading money-winner."

The $100,000 he collected — matching the largest prize the game has ever offered — from the total purse of $300,000 put Nicklaus in his customary position atop the season's money-standings with $261,769.

He won his second tournament of the year, and the 60th of his unmatched career, with some brilliant putting that produced a 275 total for the expanded 72 holes of this event over Jack's favorite hunting grounds, the 7,180 yards of the South course at the Firestone Country Club.

It was his seventh triumph on this course, including four previous.

CAMPREGHER, BELLMAR TIED

BY DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Finesse is essential to playing quality golf, but there is something special about two heavyweights slugging it out for the championship.

That should happen today at Skylinks in the final round of the Long Beach Medal Play Championship when Tony Campregher, known as "The Bull," and Mike Bellmar, called "The Bear," tangle.

Campregher is a 6-foot, 210-pounder, Bellmar a 6-1½, 215-pounder. Both are power players who hit the ball so long that the par-5s play like par-4s.

Bellmar, 25, caught Campregher, 20, with a sparkling 4-under-par 68 at Recreation Park Sunday which included a 5-under 31 on the back side, highlighted by a 25-foot eagle putt on the par-5 14th. Bellmar had birdies on the other two par-5s.

Campregher birdied the three par-5s but had to settle for a 70. That left him deadlocked with Bellmar at 6-under 138, three strokes ahead of Ben Serns of Skylinks and southpaw Larry Watts (68) of Green River.

Serns, from El Camino JC, and Greg Hetzer of Skylinks tied for low-round honors with 67s on the 6,533-yard course. Hetzer is four off the pace at 142 along with Mike Blum (69) of Old Ranch and former UC Irvine all-America Jerry Wisz (68) of Willowick.

"My putter is working," said Bellmar, who was 2-over at one juncture before shaving six strokes over the final 10 holes. He took a double bogey on the-sixth when his approach bounced over the trap and into the ice plant. He had to take an unplayable.

"Acts of God are getting me," moaned the former Long Beach Masters champion who had similar misfortune Saturday.

LOEL SCHRADER

The Trojans and their new coach

Five USC players — quarterbacks Vince Evans and Rob Hertel, offensive tackle Marvin Powell, fullback Dave Farmer and defensive tackle Gary Jeter — were discussing the coaching change at the school for the benefit of touring Pacific-8 football writers.

"Powell didn't think the switch from John McKay to John Robinson would affect the program."

"I don't give a damn who the head coach is," said Powell. "You give me a job and I'll give you eight good hours. If you open the door for me, I'm going to walk in."

"What you want done, I'll do. I didn't come here to make the rules, I came here to graduate and I'm going to."

Bell has maintained a sense of humor despite the pressures of being an all-America and a Heisman Trophy candidate.

"I really dug coach McKay's practices," he said with a grin. "Sometimes they would be only an hour or an hour and a half."

"But basically, the change hasn't affected us. The tradition we have at USC is the respect we all have for each other. The coaches respect us. That's why the program has been so successful."

Ram offense, or lack of it, causes alarm

By RICH ROBERTS
Staff Writer

The San Francisco 49ers used to be a team the Rams could beat in their sleep, and it looked as if they were trying to.

Everyone has a theory why the offense couldn't score any touchdowns in Saturday night's 10-3 victory that closed their exhibition season on a clean 6-0.

"I'm a little disappointed in some of the plays that were called," says Ron Jaworski, the quarterback.

"We could have used some of the deeper stuff. We were conservative. But, then, we killed ourselves with mistakes and penalties."

The plays are called by a network of Ram brains emanating from Leeman Bennett in the press box to offensive coordinator Ken Meyer on the sideline, with approval of Chuck Knox.

THEY WERE NOT pleased with how Jaworski and the rest of the offense executed their suggestions, but most coaches believe that the QB usually receives too much credit for a win and too much blame for a loss.

There are other theories.

Tom Mack, the Rams' all-pro left guard: "I can tell you we're not as bad as you might want to believe. When you play a pre-season game you work on individual techniques. When the league starts you're more concerned about all working together."

Dennis Harrah, the young right guard: "San Francisco was the best team we've faced so far. They came after you, and they worked their stunts up front like it was the 10th game of the season. We didn't do a good job, but they were more intense than any club we've played."

Monte Clark, the 49ers' rookie coach: "I thought our defense played well enough to win three games. It was truly a championship effort by them."

JAWORSKI AGAIN: "I couldn't get a 'feel' for the guys. Maybe it's because our first (league) game is coming up, or that we just broke training camp, moved out of Fullerton and the guys are busy moving into their homes and apartments and weren't thinking enough about football, I don't know."

Jaworski seemed none the worse for wear after being sacked seven times. Counterpart Jim Plunkett was chased out of bounds or dumped five times but threw four interceptions. Jaworski was picked off once.

"I don't want to hurt us by throwing the ball up for grabs," Ron says, "so I'll take the loss if I can't find anybody open."

There is no concern with the Rams' defense, although the 49ers' much-improved running game netted 171 yards, topped by Wilbur Jackson's 87 on only 15 carries.

The Rams ran for 166, led by Lawrence McCutcheon's 65 for 18. Knox is still undecided about a running back combination.

"We played (John) Cappelletti and McCutcheon in the same backfield quite a bit in the second half, but I haven't decided yet whether we'll use that backfield," he said.

Cappelletti finished pre-season with 237 yards and a 4.8 average. McCutcheon was 276 and 4.3. Bertelsen 108 and 2.8.

The old problem is that Bertelsen plays tailback and Cappelletti fullback. McCutcheon shifting to the opposite position. Bertelsen's rushing has been hampered by a surgical knee, but he is still valued as a blocker for McCutcheon.

Knox's problem is to find a workable solution in all of that but, what the heck, he still has six days until the season opens.

Patriots, 20-7 Defense lifts Denver, 30-17

Associated Press

Rookie Lonnie Perrin and veteran Randy Gradishar turned defensive plays into touchdowns Sunday to lead the Denver Broncos to a come-from-behind 30-17 victory over the Minnesota Vikings in their final National Football League preseason game.

In Sunday's other contest, second-period scoring runs by Don Calhoun and Ike Forte lifted New England over Philadelphia, 20-7.

Perrin's touchdown came early in the fourth quarter when he blocked a

Minnesota punt, then caught the ball on the 29-yard line and raced in for the touchdown.

In the final minute of play a Vikings' threat ended when tackle John Grant deflected a Fran Tarkenton pass, and Gradishar intercepted and raced down the sidelines 87 yards for the touchdown.

Tarkenton passed for more than 300 yards and had 27 completions out of 40 attempts.

CALHOUN ran 10 yards and Forte five, as the Patriots capitalized on the Eagles' turnovers. Calhoun's run followed a fumble by Philadelphia quarterback Mike Boryla. Forte's burst with a minute remaining in the second quarter capped a drive that started when a Boryla pass was intercepted in the Philadelphia end zone by Patriots cornerback Bob Howard.

Ilie on his best behavior

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP)—It was a breeze for Wimbledon titleholders Chris Evert and Bjorn Borg and one could almost detect invisible halos dancing around the head of devilish Ilie Nastase Sunday in the third round of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

The fifth-seeded Nastase, whose maniacal outbursts almost triggered a riot on the center court 48 hours before, wasn't perfect—but he wasn't obnoxious either as he harnessed his skilled game for a 6-2, 7-5 victory over mustachioed Marty Riessen, the former U.S. Davis Cupper.

Nastase said he was "very nervous before the match. It was like going into the Colosseum. I was never feeling so bad before a match."

The made-up Romanian received a mixture of boos and cheers when he was escorted into the stadium and, although provoked by two foot-fault calls and distracting yells from the gallery, his only offenses were a stony stare at a linesman and a mild protest to the umpire. Another time, he petulantly served a double-fault to accent confusion in the umpire's chair.

The top-seeded Miss Evert, playing every shot as if the title hung in the balance, crushed Glynnis Coles, a big hard-hitting Britisher, 6-0, 6-0.

It was Chris' 97th consecutive victory on clay covering 21 tournaments since she last was beaten on the surface by Evonne Goolagong in the Western Open in 1973.

Borg, seeded No. 2 behind Jimmy Connors, gave an almost errorless performance in whipping John Lloyd, a 22-year-old classical shotmaker out of Britain, 6-3, 6-3.

Wins U.S. Amateur, 8 and 6 Sander makes it look easy

Bill Sander, the 20-year-old Pacific Northwest tidest from Kenmore, Wash., captured the 76th United States Amateur Golf Championship Sunday, overwhelming southern Parker Moore, 8 and 6, in their scheduled 36-hole final.

Sander took the lead on the first hole and was never headed in the final battle at the Bel Air Country Club course. The victory was the most decisive in match play for the event since Jack Nicklaus whipped Duddy Wysong by the same count in 1961.

Sander closed out the match with a 12-foot putt on the 30th hole for a birdie, which left him just one over par for the full distance.

Sander had dropped out of Brigham Young University 18 months ago and said, "The last year and one half of my life has been playing golf."

He started the final match with a birdie on the 487-yard first hole and built a five-hole margin at the end of the first nine.

Moore, 22 and a summer graduate of Clemson University, rallied to cut the margin to one hole at the end of the 15th but then lost the final three holes.

Sander shot a two-under-par 34 for that first nine, five better than his foe from Laurens, S.C.

Moore battled a balky putter on the afternoon round with three-putt greens at the third, sixth and seventh holes as Sander shoved his margin to seven holes and put the match out of reach.

Sander, sometimes talking to the ball ala baseball pitcher Mark (The Bird) Fidrych, built a five-hole lead after nine holes, saw it cut to a single hole after 15 to Moore's rally and then gained again.

A cosy gallery of about 300 watched the final match between the two virtual unknowns. Moore had won six matches after drawing an opening bye while the 6-foot-2, 170-pound Sander had captured seven.

The new champion, who has enrolled at the University of Houston and will leave for there immediately, said he started golf as a 12-year-old when his father gave him a five iron.

"In high school, I played golf everyday," he said. "I enrolled in Brigham Young in the fall of 1974, but went there only one semester."

Team Canada edges USA Russians upset with officiating

MONTREAL (AP)—The team representing the Soviet Union at the Canada Cup international ice hockey tournament threatened to pull out of the event Sunday, and tournament director Alan Eagleson said, "If they want to go, I'll help them pack."

Officials of the Soviet squad were incensed over the performance of Canadian referee Andre Lagasse, who handled Sunday's 3-3 Russian tie against the team from Sweden.

Soviet assistant coach Robert Cherenkov said after the game that, "I blame the officials for the Soviet not winning the game. We had to play the Swedes and the referees."

"We were shorthanded too much," Cherenkov claimed after the game. "It is a great tribute to our players that we overcame such a difficult situation."

Eagleson was having none of that. "I don't think it's serious," he said at a news conference preceding the Team USA-Team Canada game Sunday night. "It's a tempest in a teapot. Any time Russia loses or ties, they blame the referees and threaten to pull out of the tournament."

In Sunday's other games, first-period goals by Phil Esposito, Pete Mahovlich and Bobby Hull carried Team Canada to a 4-2 victory over Team USA and Czechoslovakia logged the first shutout of the tournament by beating Finland, 8-0.

Don't miss a single day of CASH-O
A new game starts each Thursday
All correct entries qualify for the Grand Prize Drawing

★ HOW TO PLAY ★

CASH-O is a weekly game played with numbers. Games begin on Thursday and end on Tuesday. A CASH-O chart will be published each of these days in the Independent Press-Telegram. A CASH-O chart contains 24 number boxes and a CASH-O box in the center. Three or four new numbers will be published each day Thursday through Tuesday. A total of 22 numbers will be published by Tuesday.

Copy the published numbers on your CASH-O entry form (or draw your own entry form) as they appear in the Independent Press-Telegram each day, Thursday through Tuesday. By Tuesday you will find that there are only two numbers missing. When you fill in the two correct numbers you have solved CASH-O.

How you arrive at the correct solution to CASH-O and what the two missing numbers are, is what makes CASH-O a real challenge. Look out! CASH-O may fool you. To solve CASH-O you may have to add, subtract, multiply, divide or you may have to do a combination of those things. You may even have to find another way to solve CASH-O, such as by inverting numbers or by seeing a pattern develop which could lead you to a solution. CASH-O is tricky. It's not only a new game with a new solution each week, but the method of solution may also change each week. Watch it!

★ RULES ★

1. It is not necessary to buy or subscribe to the Independent Press-Telegram or to use a CASH-O entry form. Copies of these newspapers can be checked at public libraries. You may submit an entry by copying on a plain sheet of paper the entry form and the published numbers as they appear in the Independent Press-Telegram together with your solution of the two unpublished numbers. Photo or mechanically reproduced entries will not be accepted.

2. After you have completed your CASH-O entry, mail it to:
CASH-O
Independent Press-Telegram
P.O. Box 420
Long Beach, CA 90801

or bring your entry to the Independent Press-Telegram building at 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach.

3. There is no limit on the number of entries you may submit, but each entry must be in a separate envelope and each must be received no later than 5 p.m. of the Monday following the end of each weekly contest. Prize winners will be determined by random drawings among the correct solutions received on time. If no correct solutions are received or fewer correct solutions are submitted than the number of prizes offered, the prizes, or the remaining prizes, will be awarded by means of random drawings from all entries received by the closing time. The decisions of the Independent Press-Telegram judges are final in all cases.

4. PRIZES: Each week one first prize of $300, one second prize of $200 and five third prizes of $100 each will be awarded. BONUS: A 10% cash bonus will be awarded to regular CASH-O weekly winners who are verified daily home delivery subscribers to the Independent or Press-Telegram as of the date of the drawing.

GRAND PRIZE: After the last CASH-O game, the Grand Prize 1977 Ford Thunderbird winner will be selected at random from all correct entries received, including past winners.

Winners' names and the answers to the weekly puzzles will be published in the Independent Press-Telegram on the Wednesday following each game's deadline. Cash prizes will be mailed.

5. The contest is open to anyone 18 years of age or older, except employees, circulation representatives and their immediate families of the Independent Press-Telegram, Knight-Ridder Newspapers, Inc., its affiliated companies, and Marden-Kane, Inc.

6. The winners grant the Independent Press-Telegram the right to publish their names and photographs without additional compensation. Local, state and federal taxes, if any, must be borne by the winners.

7. NO TELEPHONE INFORMATION REGARDING DAILY NUMBERS WILL BE GIVEN.

BOBBY UNSER CAPTURES CAL 500—

Johncock took third place and was the only other driver in the field of 33 to finish on the same lap with the winner. His Sinmast teammate Dallenbach limped home fourth two laps behind. He finished without the benefit of fourth gear.

Because of the painstakingly slow pace early in the race, Unser averaged an embarrassing 143.246 mph, almost 17 mph off the race record of 160.106 mph set by Jim McElreath in the inaugural Cal 500 six years ago.

Three separate accidents before the 200-mile mark contributed to the snail's pace.

None of the drivers in incidents received serious injuries, although a two-car melee involving race rookie Danny Ongais and Duane Carter Jr. totally demolished one car and forced the race to be yellow-flagged for 10 laps.

Ongais, 31, a teammate to Al Unser in one of the radical Parnelli-Cosworths owned by Parnelli Jones, was making his USAC championship debut after a distinguished career in drag racing and Formula 5000 competition.

However, on lap 54, the Hawaiian-born Ongais lost control of the car exiting turn 2, appeared to momentarily correct the problem then rammed the outer concrete retaining wall at about 160 mph.

The car immediately became airborne, flipped three or four times and came to rest upside down in the dirt infield below the apron in turn 3. In an attempt to avoid Ongais' careening car, Carter locked his brakes, dove in the dirt and then shot across the asphalt and rammed the outer wall also.

It was then that Salt Walther, victim of a similar grim crash at Indianapolis in 1973 in which he lost most of the use of his left hand, happened on the scene and saw Ongais trapped in the wreckage and trying vainly to extricate himself.

"I saw the whole thing," said Walther. "I thought, 'My, God, no one's helping him.' So I parked my car and ran over to get his car upright. I know what I've been through the last three years and I certainly wouldn't wish that on anybody."

Walther and Carter, who had emerged from his own wreckage, were the first to reach Ongais and together they attempted to lift the car back on its wheels. By then rescue crews were at the scene and Ongais was removed and placed in an ambulance.

He was taken to the infield hospital, where a track physician determined that he suffered "multiple contusions and bruises" from the tremendous impact and possible ligament damage in his toes. He was held for observation, but later released.

John Mahler and Billy Vukovich both looped their cars and scraped the wall in turn one early on in the race, with Vuk going to the infield infirmary complaining of a sore foot. He also was treated and released.

Second-place finisher Johnny Rutherford said afterward that the accidents may have been triggered "by a bunch of slow characters out there."

"I've never seen so many slow cars running in the fast groove," he fumed. "They just persist in staying there and causing all sorts of problems for the leaders. When they do that it messes up the aerodynamics when you're running close together at 200 mph."

But the slow pace and resultant accidents in no way detracted from Unser's spectacular $82,986 march to the pay window.

He thus became the first man ever to repeat as champion, having also won in 1974, and his 24th victory in USAC championship competition had to be one of his most gratifying, although he wouldn't admit it to the assembled press afterward.

His future in Indianapolis somewhat clouded last November when he left the much-vaunted Dan Gurney stable after a series of heated arguments, allegedly over Gurney's insistence that he wanted to only run the three USAC 500-mile events. Bobby wanted to go for the championship and run all the races on the calendar.

So he joined Robert Fletcher, a Phoenix tire dealer, and his Cobra team at the beginning of the season—knowing full well that "we had a long way to go because it takes one or two years to form a competitive team. We're still giving away a lot to some of the front-running teams."

"I'm not going to say we were lucky today, but I'm still not convinced we can be a winner every time out. You've got to have confidence and I don't think we've reached that stage yet."

Okay, Bobby, try to convince the guys you beat of that fact.

SCHRADER—

"They told my mother, 'Don't worry about a thing when they recruited me,'" said the 6-5, 265-pound offensive tackle from Fayetteville, N.C.

THE TERROR OF TAMPA: Excerpts from an interview of John McKay by reporters covering the Tampa Bay Buccaneers of the National Football League:

Reporter: John Brodie says your quarterback, Steve Spurrier, throws one of every three passes into the ground.

McKay: Then I guess we'll have to get shorter receivers.

Reporter: One of your placekickers, Pete Rajecki, says you make him nervous when you watch him during workouts.

McKay: I don't know what to do about that. I plan to attend every game.

Reporter: Realistically, how many games can Tampa Bay expect to win this season?

McKay: We'll approach the season thinking we'll win 14 games, and then after the first game we'll say, "Well, I'll be damned."

CUFF STUFF: Former UCLA quarterback John Scarra said he chose to sign with the Canadian Football League because the British Columbia Lions said he would be given a chance to play quarterback. The other night against Montreal, Scarra played 18 seconds at quarterback and completed a pass for 22 yards. But he saw plenty of action. As a receiver, he caught two passes for 45 yards and, as a defensive back, intercepted a pass. He also returned a punt for 14 yards. One of the Pacific-8 Conference presidents says members of the National Collegiate Athletic Association will pass legislation in January which will restrict athletic scholarships to a need basis. "The reason it will pass," says the president, "is because many presidents are going to be there doing the voting instead of the athletic directors." Maybe. But policing the system will cost more money than it will save. Oregon State football coach Craig Fertig, a former USC assistant, told football writers the reason he loves it in Corvallis is "because my son, Marc, walks through the woods on the way to school and never sees a car." A couple of days later one of the writers said: "Hey, do you remember that quote from Fertig about his son walking through the woods to school? I just happened to think, his son doesn't even go to school."

SPORTS CHATTER: Sports writer Hubert Mizell of St. Petersburg, Fla., has done a survey on the educational records of NFL players and their college affiliations. Notre Dame heads the list with a 100 per cent record on college degrees — 24 players and 24 degrees. California with 10 of 12 and Boston College with 9 of 11 are next, contrasted with 1 of 12 for Oklahoma State and 1 of 10 for Louisiana State. Ohio State coach Woody Hayes is always making noises about his "scholar-athletes," but only 10 of 28 Buckeyes in the NFL have college degrees. Oklahoma is only 3 of 18, Texas 2 of 13, USC 18 of 41, Nebraska 9 of 27, Alabama 5 of 11, Tennessee 4 of 15, Penn State 17 of 28, Syracuse 6 of 15, Michigan 15 of 25, Michigan State 7 of 17, Illinois 5 of 13, Minnesota 6 of 20 and Purdue 13 of 21. The black schools are about the same — Grambling 9 of 20, Alcorn 7 of 17, Jackson State 8 of 17 and Prairie View 6 of 13. There's something wrong with a system in which the percentage of graduates is so low at many schools. There are 32 Californians on Arizona State's football team and only 26 from Arizona.

Championship effort

UNSER'S MECHANIC—

"I got passed before when the green came out, and I really didn't want that to happen again, so I said ol' giddyap's gotta go a little faster. I turned the engine a littler tighter (Ed. — Turned up the power in the supercharger), and before I shifted I ground the gears. I just decided to hell with it — I'm either gonna win this race or break something trying, but I'm damn sure not gonna get passed like that again."

Unser had only two problems and one frightening moment.

"One time when Johnny (Rutherford) was leading and I was running second on a yellow flag, the green came out and the car in front of us wouldn't go.

"Johnny had a moment of indecision when he let off the gas and hit his brakes, and I damned near hit him because I knew he was going by the guy. It's the thing to do."

"I looked back behind me and here come Wally (Dallenbach) and I thought oh, golly, here it goes — all three of us in the same corner."

At about 150 laps Unser lost his right front spoiler and thought something more serious had gone wrong with the car.

"I finally saw what was wrong and called Wayne on the radio to start making some adjustments on the chassis to try to compensate for it. We compensated out about 70 per cent of the problem."

The only other difficulty was the failure of a "cool vest" designed by racing equipment manufacturer and rival driver Bill Simpson. The device circulates cold water around the driver's torso.

"I put it on before the race started and thought, oh boy, this is gonna be dandy, but it never worked."

Otherwise, he kept a cool head throughout, handling the eight pit stops scheduled by his crew with precision often lacking in his rivals, who needed one or two more stops for fuel or tires.

"It takes awhile to get everybody working together," Unser said, "a little time, a little talking, a few arguments, and you can have good stops all day."

Bob Fletcher, the car owner and Cobra Tire tycoon, said, "The only anxious moment I had was when the last yellow came out. We knew we had everybody else by at least one pit stop. But when Bobby decided to stand on it, that made the difference."

Nicklaus wins 'World Series'

World Series titles when it was played under a four-man, 36-hole format, an American Golf Classic and last year's PGA national championship.

His career winnings on this course alone now total an amazing $489,930.

The key to Nicklaus' round was some fantastic putting that followed the potential disaster of a double bogey on the fourth hole. That dropped him back into a momentary tie for the lead. But he parred the next hole, then one-upped eight of the next 10 holes, six of them in a row.

Hale Irwin took second place in the elite, international field of 20 with a strong, three-under-par 67 in the cool, occasionally cloudy and breezy weather. He finished with a 279 total and a $50,000 check that made him only the 12th man to surpass $1 million in career earnings.

Veteran Dave Hill was third alone with a hard-won par 70 and a 280 total.

Australian David Graham, who qualified for this event with a victory last week in the American Golf Classic across the street on the North course, was third alone with a 69-281.

Hubert Green had a share of third while he bogeyed the final hole for a 73-282. Tom Watson and Lee Trevino—who scored a nine on the 18th hole Saturday—were next at 283. Each matched par 70 over the last 18 holes.

Nicklaus started the day with a two-stroke lead, reached the par-five second hole in two and two-putted for a birdie, but drove into the trees and bogeyed the third.

JACK NICKLAUS $100,000 richer

On the 465-yard fourth, a par four, he drove into the rough, flew his second over the green, chipped poorly and then three-putted from the fringe for a double bogey that suddenly opened the gates to a host of challengers. At that point, there were 10 men within five strokes of the lead. None made a move.

"I did manage to save some pars after driving into trouble," Nicklaus admitted, admiring the $100,000 check and commented:

"I don't think I've ever seen one of those before."

Bellmar's birdie string started with a 2-putt on the par-5 ninth. He knocked in a 30-footer at 10, the eagle putt at 14, a 5-footer at 15 and a 4-footer at 17. His approach bounced out of the trap and onto the green at the 17th, a lucky break.

Campregher three-putted three times, highly unusual for him. The longest putt he made was a 2-footer. But by getting on or close on the par-5s he was able to remain under par.

Hetzer and Serns each had six birdies and one bogey. All of Serns' putts were inside six feet except one monster of 75 feet on the 10th. That wasn't the longest "tap" of the day, however. Blum holed an 81-footer on the eighth. Hetzer's longest putt was nine feet.

Watts and Wisz played in the same threesome and had identical nines of 35-33 with bogeys on the third hole. They both closed with a rush. Watts birdied the 15th, 16th and 17th, Wisz the 15th, 17th and 18th.

Mel Collins (69), Mike Todd (71), Max Bubblitz (70), David Games (71), Danny Bibb (71), Tom Simmerman (71) and Gary Ballantyne (70) were other par-busters Sunday.

U.S.-Mexico ties at low point

By ALAN RIDING
New York Times Service

MEXICO CITY — The militant efforts of President Luis Echeverria Alvarez to reduce Mexico's identity with the United States and to align it with the third world have driven relations between Washington and Mexico City to their lowest ebb in recent memory.

Although there is no single point of conflict between the two governments, a growing mood of mutual irritation has led to sharp exchanges on several long-standing bilateral issues, such as the alleged ill-treatment of illegal Mexican migrants to the United States and of Americans serving prison terms in Mexico.

YET, diplomats from both countries, who have watched helplessly as political tensions have grown, are also confident that Mexico's president-elect, Jose Lopez Portillo, who takes office Dec. 1, will seek a normalization of ties with Washington.

Both the outgoing and incoming Mexican presidents will be visiting the United States this month. Echeverria will go to San Antonio, Tex., Tuesday to open a Mexican trade fair, although a planned meeting there with President Ford has fallen through.

Two weeks later, Lopez Portillo will visit Washington, where he will lunch with Ford and meet other U.S. officials.

In their different ways, though, both trips — Echeverria promoting Mexican exports to the United States and Lopez Portillo initiating his own political dialogue with Washington — reflect the complexity of Mexico's relationship with the United States.

As a nation of mixed Indian and Spanish heritage, Mexico is proudly nationalistic and always anxious to assert its cultural and political independence of the United States.

Yet, possessing an economy that relies heavily on the United States to provide credit, make investments, send tourists, buy its products and even absorb its unemployed in the shape of illegal migrants, Mexico remains unavoidably vulnerable to developments north of the 2,000-mile-long border.

During the past five years, however, Echeverria has chosen to ignore this economic dependence and has instead sought to tap the grudging resentment many Mexicans feel toward the United States through third world rhetoric that has not infrequently smacked of anti-Americanism.

Taking their cue from the President, Mexican officials, congressmen and newspapers have also singled out the U.S. government, Congress, private companies, bankers, farmers and even correspondents as somehow responsible for Mexican and third world problems as varied as inflation and terrorism.

IN PRIVATE, Echeverria himself has frequently urged senior U.S. officials and businessmen to ignore his rhetorical statements as a political necessity destined exclusively for domestic consumption.

The view that the crisis in U.S.-Mexican relations is specifically linked to Echeverria's attitude toward Washington is further strengthened by the absence of a wave of anti-Americanism among the Mexican population at large.

In business circles and in the tourist industry, many Mexicans even vocally blame their president's attacks on the United States for the contraction of economic activity.

Echeverria, however, has grown ever more convinced of the need for "a new world economic order" to rescue the third world from its poverty, a belief that he has translated into attacks on the United States and other industrialized nations.

Frequently reminding Washington of its role in the overthrow of the late President Salvador Allende of Chile, the Mexican leader has also complained that speculation against the Mexican currency, a recent American Jewish tourist boycott, attacks on his regime by U.S. congressmen and even isolated acts of terrorism are part of a "destabilization" plan inspired by "outside forces" — a euphemism for the United States.

Paradoxically, though, the Mexican government remains highly sensitive about its image in the United States. For example, at the same time as Echeverria is lambasting the United States for opposing world economic reforms, the government spends millions of dollars on advertising trying to convince American investors and tourists that they are welcome here.

Yet foreign diplomats here are convinced that most recent bilateral squabbles have been about issues that would otherwise be ignored — or at least dealt with routinely — were it not for the underlying tensions in the relationship.

For example, apparently angered by frequent U.S. complaints about ill-treatment of American prisoners here, the Mexican government is now encouraging newspaper articles about alleged ill-treatment of Mexicans in American jails.

Yet, because power in Mexico is so centralized in the figure of the president and policy reflects the incumbent's tiniest whim, foreign diplomats expect a radical improvement of bilateral relations once Lopez Portillo takes office.

Aides close to Lopez Portillo insist that the incoming president will probably be tougher than Echeverria when negotiating trade and other agreements with the United States.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Tuesday

Your birthday today: In a year of almost spontaneous personal progress, you take on more than can be conveniently handled. By managing to figure some means to work your way up out of the problem, you learn priceless skills and wisdom. Relationships are subject to quirk of circumstance, need care to avoid misunderstandings. Today's natives pursue serious reforms, often are highly literate people gifted in the art of effective speech.

Aries (March 21-April 19): People get underfoot, and you must clear up details. Let others seek publicity and welcome. Let them also take credit for the pile-up blocking progress.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Make haste slowly, so you won't cover last week's errors. Neighbors are helpful; to say "thank you" costs little. Missing papers complicate finances.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Tackle work efforts with a minimum of comment, little discussion of recent events. Associates flabbergast everybody. At noon, pieces begin to fall in place.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Be alert for a full productive schedule or take off altogether for an expedition. News from faraway is encouraging, could be a basis for a new start.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): You gather support, perhaps financial backing for any reasonable project. Your own judgment of others' schemes suffers from over-optimism, misplaced enthusiasm.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Rephrase and repeat to make sure you are understood. Hobbies are potential sources of better contacts. Show off a bit, but don't confide inside information.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get the fall season off to a roaring start! With care to get figures straight the first time, you can obtain a special advantage. An inventory is in order.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): On a day suited to full-scale work programs, your mind is busy building castles in the air. Combine the two factors creatively, but avoid speculative moves.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Things smooth out, and you take too much for granted. Somebody, not in place, is unable to communicate or cooperate. Checking in advance averts such problems.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Stick to conventional methods. People fall for showmanship, fancy gestures, but only for the moment. Talk directly with officials if dealing with institutions.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A plunge into an extended long-term venture has good prospects of eventually succeeding very well. Use all the facilities available to stage your presentation.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): New advice puts your situation in a different perspective. Business and work plans are subject to revision as people change their ideas, specifications.

New fire splits job of control

LAKE BERRYESSA (AP) — Fire licked through 5,000 acres of oak and brushland Sunday, while a new fire flared up six miles to the south, forcing fire fighters to split their strength between the two.

A spokesman for the California Division of Forestry said they hoped to have both fires contained by tonight.

In Sequia National Park in Tulare County, meanwhile, 25 to 30 fire fighters were called to battle a dozen small blazes started by lightning storms in the area Saturday night. Spokesman Hank Jones said the largest was three to four acres and had been contained late Saturday night.

SOME 700 fire fighters were battling the two large blazes five miles south of Lake Berryessa, which is in Napa County. The first fire broke out Saturday morning on Mount Vacca in Solano County and quickly moved north into rugged, steep terrain where fire fighters had trouble maneuvering their equipment.

By Sunday, the spokesman said, it was about half contained.

The second fire began Saturday night and covered 500 acres by Sunday, when the spokesman estimated it was about 30 per cent ringed by fire lines.

Eight aerial tankers were dropping fire retardant chemicals on the two blazes while fire fighters maneuvered some 40 trucks and other heavy equipment on the ground.

Lightning kills man; woman badly burned

BAKERSFIELD (AP) — A 23-year-old Taft man was killed and his female companion was seriously injured when they were struck by lightning at the Kern County Fairgrounds here, sheriff's deputies said Sunday.

The victims, whose names were not immediately released, were attending motorcycle races Saturday at 8:30 p.m. and were climbing out of a pickup truck when the lightning bolt hit the man.

The woman apparently was burned by a flashback. She was taken to the Kern County Medical Center where she was reported in fair condition Sunday in the intensive care unit.

Burglars get guns

Restaurant Finds New Owners Through IPT Classifieds

When Meredith Reese of 9329 E. Artesia Street, Bellflower, decided to retire from the restaurant business, she turned to an Independent Press-Telegram Classified to sell her cafe. A low-cost, far-reaching 12-day Classified easily brought in a pair of new owners.

Whether you're selling a business or used furniture, no job is too large or small for IPT Classifieds. Call 432-5959 for the expert assistance of an IPT advisor.
